Sir Esme's Faux Pas.
MacDonald Reads Hazlitt.
Some Flying.
J. P. Morgan Groceries.

SIR ESME HOWARD may have "got in right" when he promised to make the British embassy dry. But he got in very wrong on Thursday when he consulted privately with Senator Borah about reduction of the navy, freedom of the seas and closer relations between this country and Great Britain.

Senator Borah is head of the Senate committee on foreign affairs, and free to talk to anybody.

But Sir Esme is not accredited ambassador to Senator Borah, but to Herbert Hoover and the United States Government.

Foreign ambassadors, if they have anything to say, are supposed to say it to the State Department or the President.

Ramsay MacDonald, flying from Scotland to London in a British bombing plane, a parachute strapped over his leather flying coat, reads Hazlitt on the way.

Hazlitt, who worked himself into a fury over the French Revolution, quarreling with everybody that did not approve it, little thought that within 100 years of his death a Socialist-Laborite would be prime minister of England without any revolution.

Max D. Steuer, brilliant New York lawyer, says the best cure for any man that fears death is Hazlitt's essay on death.

Briefly, Hazlitt says that since we don't worry because we were not alive 100 years ago, we should not worry because we won't be conscious 100 years hence.

The first time Ramsay MacDonald became prime minister of England, representing the Labor party, he met the most serious and disastrous strike in Britain's history.

Now he comes to office a second time, and British cotton mill owners announce reductions in wages affecting 300,000 spinners.

Ramon Franco, with three companions, started from Spain yesterday morning, hoping to reach the Azores at 2:30 a. m. today. Flying days will be difficult to Washington.

On this side of the ocean, Miss Viola Gentry flew up to break the non-stop re-fueling record if possible. She failed, in a fog.

"Babe" Meigs of Chicago, so-called because he is six and one-half feet high, flew from Chicago to New York and, yesterday at the Ritz-Carlton, Ford Henry Ford, sitting at the next table, that his Ford airplane that Meigs bought a year ago is as good as any made.

Mr. Ford was pleased, but was more interested in getting from Meigs for the Ford museum, the engine of an old steam threshing machine that Meigs used to drive when he was 13 years old on his father's farm.

Mr. Ford looked remarkably well and assisted Joe, feebly when Theodore, the Hite-Carlton boss, insisted on feeding him fancy breast of chicken, made abnormally white by something smeared over it.

J. Pierpont Morgan, hereditary engineer of big mergers, has put together in a little $450,000,000 concern several important food producing companies. Other companies may join the merger, creating an interesting situation for chain stores.

At present special brands are somewhat at the mercy of chain store owners, who tell manufacturers what to produce, what to charge, what profit they may have.

A big enough food combine might be able to tell chain stores what they must do.

The bumble cow is in a milk combine, the spreading chestnut tree blacksmith shops have been changed to small garages. The blacksmith is working on "big steel," established by J. Pierpont Morgan's father. Now the corner grocery becomes one bullet in a rapid-fire food machine.

Yacht Aground in Fog With 12 Aboard

New London, Ct., June 22 (AP)—The 65-foot auxiliary schooner-yacht Alamyth of New York, owned by W. P. Latham, Passaic, N. J., was ashore for a time in a thick fog today on the north side of Fisher's Island. The owner had seven guests and a crew of four on board. None was injured. The shrieking of the yacht's siren brought coast guard patrol boat 289 to the rescue.

New Rates on Iron and Steel

Washington, June 22 (AP)—A revised scale of freight rates on iron and steel articles in carloads, in territory east of Chicago and north of the Ohio river, was prescribed today by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

'BOOK' TEST OF POLICE DECRIED

A protest to Police Commissioner Wilson against the acceptances of the civil service list for promotions to the grades of sergeant and lieutenant was made today in person by Senator Joseph J. Mulhern of Dorchester.

Senator Mulhern said he spoke to Wilson on the grounds the civil service board a petition for a new examination, signed by most of those on the list.

The questions were improper, in that they were based more on book knowledge than on practical experience, Mulhern said, and he told the police commissioner that the superior court judges and law school deans support him in this opinion.

Commissioner Wilson's reply, according to the Dorchester legislator, was that he was inclined to accept the list, believing it was his duty to do so, but that he would present a petition for a new examination to the State board if one was prepared, indicating a general desire for re-examination.

WOMAN IS KILLED BY LIGHTNING

One woman dead, a child stunned and eight places struck by lightning, with flooded streets and cellars, disrupted telephone, electric light and trolley service, was the toll taken by a violent electrical storm which scourged Boston and eastern Massachusetts today.

Mrs. Viktor Turner, 37, was killed when a bolt struck from a threatening sky as she was sitting in her tent at the camp grounds of the New England Seventh Day Adventists, South Lancaster.

Robert Huke, 13, was knocked unconscious when a bolt entered the house at 234 Fayette st., Walpole, where he lives with his mother, Mrs. Ruth Huke, and six sisters and brothers.

The boy, who was sitting on a bed with a jackknife in his hand, was burned on the back, and for a time it was feared he had been fatally injured. A physician found the child had been temporarily paralyzed but would recover. The

MAKE THREATS ON MORROW

Mexico City, June 22 (AP)—Ambassador Morrow, ill and confined, has received letters threatening harm to him as a result of his activities in bringing to a successful climax negotiations for settlement of the Mexican religious controversy.

The ambassador considers the letters only the work of cranks. Questions of new assignment to go to Chamber and Senate, broke out again today.

The Pontiff showed himself in disagreement over sentences which he considered inimical to the interests of the Church, in an open letter to Cardinal Gasparri, published this evening by the Osservatore Romano.

The occasion for the Pope's return to the subject was the publication of Premier Mussolini's two speeches in brochure form.

Under date of yesterday, His Holiness writes to the Papal Secretary of State:

"The presentation anew to the public in a new typographical form of well-known speeches to Parliament relative to the Lateran treaties by the author of them, and in their original or almost original form, places us in a position of moral necessity to recall what we have said concerning the aforesaid speeches, both in a letter addressed to you on the day of Corpus Domini, May 30, and the words which we addressed to the pupils of Mondragone College.

"Will you take the necessary steps for reproduction of both letter and speech.

SPANISH FLIERS AT AZORES

Horta, Island of Fayal, The Azores, June 22—The Spanish transatlantic plane of Maj. Ramon Franco and his three companions was reported here late this afternoon to have landed on the Island of San Miguel this morning.

San Miguel is the easternmost of the Azores. The Spanish plane was at first said to have flown over San Miguel early this morning.

Their flight to the Azores is the first leg in an attempt to cross the Atlantic, the fliers hoping to reach New York Sunday or Monday.

The first report that the aviators had landed in the Azores came earlier today from Lisbon where it had been relayed by the Portuguese warship Vasco De Gama.

WOMAN KILLED, MANY PLACES HIT, 3 PLANES WRECKED IN STORM

At 80 East Squantum st, Squantum, Mrs. Theodore Davidson, 47, suffered a temporarily paralyzed arm when the bolt entered the window of her bedroom.

Farm buildings owned by Martin Kennelly in Billerica were damaged by flames caused by lightning, with damage estimated at $600. The houses and cattle were saved.

In Lexington the home of Hazen W. Hamlin, 20 Forest st, was slightly damaged when a bolt struck the chimney, passing through the walls.

The home of Herman Jaaksteinpen, known as the Carter place, in Westminster, was burned to the ground after being struck. In Gardner the home of Melville Beckett was struck, but damage was little. The Ayer-Lowell trolley system was crippled by the storm, and it was believed doubtful of service would be resumed at the road is to be sold at auction July 9.

Five houses in Hough's Neck were struck and another in Winchester, streets and cellars flooded, traffic tied up, telephone and electric lights cut off, and thousands of dollars damage inflicted in various sections.

THREE PLANES WRECKED.

Three airplanes were wrecked and two others damaged at the Boston Airport, and the top of an automobile was caved in when the high wind dropped two of the ships on it.

The planes struck in Hough's Neck were those of A. A. Clancy, 22 st, and A. D. Cruss, 27 Cochrane st. W. H. Berry, 48 Eastbrook st, a house at 28 Charles st and another the location at which was not quoted. With the exception of the Clancy house the damage was slight.

At 166 Woodrow ave, Dorchester, a three-story wooden building with a slate roof, the lightning struck the top of the house, crashing through to a room in which a child was sleeping.

BOLT ENTERS ROOM.

Mr. and Mrs. Kopel Berg, occupants of the top apartment, were at the door downstairs, the latter hand saying good-by so he left for work. Then six-months-old daughter, Rene, was asleep in the bedroom, when the bolt struck. The child was stunned, but was not injured.

Austin A. Clancy, his wife and six children were asleep in their home in Hough's st, Hough's Neck, when a bolt of lightning struck the chimney, tore through the roof, ripped out the woodwork in the house and went through the room where Bertha Clancy, 18, was asleep. The fire department responded promptly but no blaze followed the stroke, and no one was injured.

DORCHESTER HOUSE HIT.

According to Charles Kelley, of Maverick st, East Boston, the rainfall was the heaviest in a space of time he ever witnessed in that section. Running torrents rushed down the inclines of Prescott, Putnam, Brooks and Maiden sts. Receiving drains, clogging catch basins and turning the main thoroughfare into a lake.

The water was nearly a foot deep, tieing up traffic and forcing trolley patrons to enter and leave cars several blocks farther along.

From Central sq, down telephones were out of order and cellars were flooded on Benning st. from Prescott to Marion

SOMERVILLE FLOODED

Several sections of Somerville were flooded with resultant delays to traffic and damage to stores and dwellings. Kent and Sacramento sts, both of which are fed main waves between Beacon st. and Somerville ave., were floored by swaling torrents. Somerville ave., between Spring and Lowell sts., was transformed into a river, dotted with stalled automobiles and trolley cars.

In the Observatory Hill section of Cambridge back yards were filled with water. Automobiles were stalled on Magazine st., and water poured into the subways.

A high tension wire was broken in Arlington st., Chelsea, causing a considerable delay to trolley and automobile traffic. A fire alarm box in the New Haven yards at Hyde Park was rung in by lightning.

THREE PLANES WRECKED

Lights and telephones in Stoneham went dead when the storm short-circuited wires, and in Wakefield, where the downpour was not so heavy, a number of cellars were reported flooded.

At the Airport Frank Citorio, night watchman for the Curtiss Company, spent a frantic 15 minutes trying to prevent some 30 airplanes standing together, an American Eagle and a Moth, were swooped up by the wind and hurled in back of the Curtiss hangar on top of an automobile owned by Frank Crawford, a mechanic. The Moth, the property of Andrew Iyanoff of the East Coast Aircraft Sales Corp, landed on the Eagle, owned by Carl Jackson of Beverly, both machines being badly battered and twisted.

Several operators fainted in the Quincy telephone office when the storm was at its worst. Cars were stalled at Hancock st. and Billings rd, Wollaston, when the catchbasins became clogged.

On the Southern Artery near Washington st., Dorchester, the rain washed sand down from the hillside and coated the road with a foul deep, making the going hazardous for automobiles.

The catch basin was clogged at Talbot ave. and Harvard st., and also at Columbia rd and Hamilton st., turning both thoroughfares into rivers. Wires were down in Mountain ave. and in Oakwood st., Dorchester. Lower Mills branches were ripped from trees and strewn on the pavement.

WARNER FINDS STATE COURTS ACTIVE

Attorney-General Joseph E. Warner, following a conference today at the State House with various district attorneys, indicated that the law machinery of the state is working satisfactorily.

"There are fewer pending trouble cases of felonies and misdemeanors throughout the state than at any time for years," he said. "There are no felony cases in Franklin, Hampshire and Middlesex Counties. In Berkshire there is but one case, while in Essex and Plymouth Counties it is expected that all pending felony cases will be disposed of at either sessions or sittings.

"In Suffolk there are less trouble cases than at any time during the past ten years."

It was the opinion of the enforcing officers, he continued, that the violations of the prohibition laws have been pushed as vigorously as possible and that the padlock law has been invoked to all cases where it was deemed that the prosecution of offenders through this means was the best medium to be used.

Soviet Ice Ship Off to Put Radio Near the North Pole

Leningrad, U. S. S. R., June 22 (AP)—The ice cutter Sedoy will sail shortly for Franz Josef Land, east of Spitsbergen, where the Soviet government will build the northernmost radio and hydrometeorological station in the world.

Russian scientists assert it will benefit the world in weather forecasts with greater precision than stations less distant.

The Sedoy will be equipped with a hydroplane, while colonists aboard will be provided with provisions and essentials for three years.

TEN BURNED IN TRUCK BLAZE

Newark, N. J., June 22 (AP)—A truck loaded with laborers and a touring car collided at Mount Vernon Place and Florence ave., today. Both machines overturned and burst into flames. Ten of the truck's passengers received minor injuries, but George Nathstein of this city, driver and sole occupant of the other vehicle, escaped unharmed.

The truck was driven by Harry Kaplan of Bayonne. Most of the injured men were residents of that city.

GIRL SEES FLIER DIE IN CRASH

Texarkana, Ark., June 22 (AP)—Oscar Nash, pilot, was killed and Howard Webb, passenger, both of Texarkana, was injured as their plane crashed into a tree at a temporary landing field near here while taking off for Dallas.

Miss Gladys Fisher, who had taken them to the field in an automobile, alone witnessed the accident. She extricated both men from the wreckage, placed them in the car and brought them to a hospital here, but Nash was dead when they arrived.

Pocket Pinned Up, But Money Is Gone

The next time Arthur Juley, a baker of Princeton st., East Boston, starts to carry a bankroll around with him, he'll probably remember today and reconsider. Juley was the victim of a woman pickpocket in the Scollay sq. subway station. She extracted $65 from his pants pocket which was closed with three safety pins.

He said he missed the money at Park st. and remembered a woman jostling him while a man hindered his progress when he tried to get away.

Honeymoon on Zep

New York, June 22 (AP)—Joseph D. Jessel, clothing manufacturer, and Verenetta Hoots, musical comedy actress, hope to pass their honeymoon on the Graf Zeppelin's round-the-world cruise. They are engaged and have reserved passage. They met when the Zeppelin was at Lakehurst, N. J.

ROW WITH CANADA FEARED

Detroit, June 22 (INS)—International complications between United States and Canadian authorities appeared imminent today, following reports that Alfred Cuddy, Deputy commissioner of Ontario provincial police, would inform W. H. Price, Ontario attorney-general, that rum running U. S. Customs agents are indulging in promiscuous gunplay in Canadian waters.

Cuddy was to make his report to Price in Toronto today, following his investigation of recent gunplay episodes on the Detroit river.

COMPLAIN OF U. S. BOATS

The Canadian official said several complaints had been made to him that American patrol boats, guarding the 102-mile liquor waterfront here, have fired across the international line at rum runners in Canadian waters.

Commenting on the report that Washington would protest to Ottawa on the recent shooting affray off Belle Isle in which rum runners fired from Canadian waters upon a customs patrol boat, Cuddy said:

"I understand that the Dominion Government will retaliate by showing that U. S. patrol boats have frequently crossed the international line into Canadian waters and patroled up and close to the Canadian shore."

WOULD DOUBLE GUARD

Cuddy said he would urge the doubling of provincial police forces stationed along the border, and the seizure of guns and boats when weapons are found in rum-running crafts in Canadian waters.

"My investigation, however," Cuddy said, "has convinced me that Canadian rum-runners are not carrying weapons. The gunplay is being done by smugglers from Detroit. If weapons are found aboard rum-running boats in Canadian waters severe penalties will be dealt out."

"My investigation, however," Cuddy said, "has convinced me that Canadian rum-runners are not carrying weapons. The gunplaying is being done by smugglers from Detroit. If weapons are found aboard rum-running boats in Canadian waters severe penalties will be dealt out."

After investigating the bullet-riddled hull of a pleasure craft allegedly fired upon by Customs patrol agents, Cuddy asserted federal agents were not justified in the shooting.

Cuddy pointed out that international complications would be certain to result should there be a slaying along the border from such shootings.

Charges of Attempted Murder Await Rum Men

Windsor, Ont., June 22 (AP)—Charges of attempted murder await on both sides of the river the rum runners who opened fire on a customs patrol boat Wednesday.

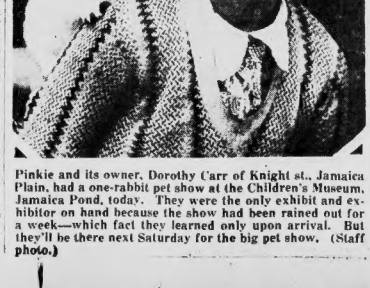
On the Canadian side Alfred E. Cuddy, deputy commissioner of Ontario police, said that if they are identified, charges would be laid against them in Canadian courts. He said after his investigation that he was convinced the persons responsible were Americans.

"I am sure that our people are not mixed up in this," he said. "The persons who are doing the shooting are from the other side. They are mighty hard to catch with arms on their persons when they are over here."

Walter S. Petty, acting collector of customs for Detroit, said that if the men were captured in Canada their extradition to face charges of attempted murder in United States court would be demanded.

Another clash between rum-runners and the customs patrol was indicated last night when firing was heard on the river about 12 miles south of Detroit.

PINKIE THE WHOLE SHOW



Pinkie and its owner, Dorothy Carr of Knight st., Jamaica Plain, had a one-rabbit pet show at the Children's Museum, Jamaica Pond, today. They were the only exhibit and exhibitor on hand because the show had been rained out for a week—which fact they learned only upon arrival. But they'll be there next Saturday for the big pet show. $115,000,000 in Liquor Sent Here From Canada

Ottawa, Ont., June 22—The Dominion Government has just published official statistics of "regular exports" of alcoholic beverages into the United States for the last seven years, down to April 1, 1929. These officially accredited exportations alone reach the amazing total of $115,327,806, but are known to be only a drop in the bucket of what actually goes over the 3500-mile boundary, since this publish total is exclusive of liquor-smuggling operations on a gigantic scale.

These officials cynically familiar with the situation, merely laugh at the gesture of stationing a few hundred United States enforcement agents at Detroit or other "strategic" points on the border.

When the government force descended on Detroit a week ago, the main line of liquor smuggling was shifted overnight, for instance, to Buffalo, although a skirmishing force of smugglers remained on the Detroit River and Lake St. Clair battle front for the sake of effect. When needful the same manouver will be repeated, they say, since the smuggling profits run into millions a week.

Year	In Dollars (Omitting Odd Figures): Ale, Beer and Porter	Spirits	Wine	Grand Total
Ending March 31			and other Alcoholics
1923	$2,696,900	$417,000	$5,300
1924	4,902,600	1,776,000	39,400
1925	4,655,600	6,777,000	198,200
1926	5,115,000	12,912,000	434,200
1927	5,525,000	18,706,000	974,400
1928	5,578,000	18,380,000	373,800
1929	5,559,000	18,112,000	350,200
Total	$32,898,000	$79,141,000	$2,378,800
Grand total—$115,327,806.

Year	In Gallons (Omitting Odd Figures): Ale, Beer and Porter	Spirits	Wine and other Alcoholics
1923	1,359,000	75,000	570
1924	2,850,000	245,000	2,200
1925	2,970,000	1,153,000	15,200
1926	3,750,000	811,000	41,350
1927	4,279,000	1,118,000	88,750
1928	3,801,000	1,128,000	31,070
1929	4,090,000	1,126,000	66,650
Total	23,030,000	4,873,000	252,190
Grand total, 28,158,190 gallons.

The public exportations from Canada to the United States of beer alone, 23,030,000 gallons, equals 230,300,000 ordinary bottles of beer, or 9,600,000 cases of 24 each of beer of two dozen bottles each.

U. S. Investigates Three Killings in Vermont

Montpelier, Vt., June 22—Information on three killings in connection with federal law enforcement has been given an agent of the Department of Justice who has been conducting a survey. The survey in this State is only part of a nation-wide investigation by the Department of Justice.

One of the deaths on which the agent secured data was that of "Ted" Webb, the customs officer who was shot by a bootlegger whose beer-laden car he stopped. The rum-runner, whose name is Mason, after a trial in which a jury disagreed, pleaded guilty to second-degree murder and is now serving a life sentence in Windsor.

The other two fatalities in the state were cases in which officers did the killing. One of these occurred several years ago, when a man alleged to be smuggling Chinese into the country was shot by immigration officers.

The other killing occurred a year or two ago, when a youth named Titus was shot and killed by Federal officers at the border as he was driving an automobile said to be carrying liquor. Though the case against the officer who shot and killed the fleeing Titus as he was chasing him, was presented to a grand jury, no indictment was returned.

The Washington agent found that there never have been any fatal shootings by the prohibition officers in this state.

Says Dry Killings Are Opposed by Church

River Forest, Ill., June 22 (AP)—The Lutheran Church is described by Dr. W. C. Kohn, president of official in the Missouri Synod, as not sympathetic to the Volstead law and as rigorously opposed to "the absolutely criminal practices of prohibition officers in shooting down innocent citizens."

Dr. Kohn, who is attending the 31th triennial conference of the Evangelical Lutheran Synod, expressed his views in a statement prepared for publication.

"Members of the Missouri synod of the Lutheran church believe that since the Volstead laws are in effect they should be personally observed," the statement said. "But we do not agree with the absolutely criminal practices of prohibition officers in shooting down innocent citizens. Nor do we believe in the principles that underlie the Volstead laws."

The Lutheran church believes all just laws should be obeyed, Dr. Kohn declared, if the enforcement is legal in itself.

"Dry shootings are sheer murder," he said. "Killing transgressors of the Volstead act without fair trial is unbiblical, un-American and uncivilized. Such unlawful killings are equal to murder. It is a criminal act to execute a man without a hearing."

Anti-Saloon Charge Denied by Governor

Lansing, Mich., June 22 (AP)—The controversy between Governor Fred W. Green and the Rev. R. N. Holsaple, superintendent of the Michigan Anti-Saloon league, has broken out again as a result of the dry league head's annual report to the league.

In the report Mr. Holsaple charged that the Governor had forced a malt tax law through the legislature by threatening to veto certain appointees as imbeciles unless they supported the malt levy.

The Governor denied exerting any influence to put the malt measure through and added: "It is too bad an organization containing so many fine people has at its head a man so undignified as to refer to legislators as imbeciles and citizens as 'civic morons.'"

Holsaple used the term "civic morons" in criticising certain "thirsty people" who build "fine homes with lavishly equipped bars in them."

Says Prohibition Saves Billions of Dollars

New York, June 22 (AP)—In the opinion of Prohibition Administrator Maurice Campbell, prohibition has saved the American people billions of dollars formerly spent for liquor.

Addressing the National Sales Managers' Club, he said that based on the average yearly expenditure of pre-war days, with no allowance for increased consumption or increased prices, $35,918,000,000 would have been spent for alcoholic drink in the last ten years but for prohibition.

PICK ELIGIBLES FOR PROMOTION IN MALDEN

Eligible lists for promotion to lieutenant in the Malden fire department and to sergeant in the Brookline police department were today set up by the Civil Service Commission.

SINCLAIR IS ON 2D JAIL TERM

Washington, June 22 (AP)—Harry F. Sinclair and Henry Mason Day, vice-president of one of Sinclair's oil companies, were ordered committed to jail today by the District of Columbia Supreme Court for contempt of court as a result of jury shadowing activities in the Fall-Sinclair trial.

Sinclair now is in the Washington jail serving three months' sentence for refusal to answer questions asked by a Senate investigating committee, and the sentence imposed today will start immediately and run concurrently with his present sentence. As a result the time the oil man must remain behind the bars will be shortened by about 35 days.

Allowing time off for good behavior it is expected he will complete both sentences by about the last week in November.

Bloody Suit and Cut Hand Don't Prove Window Break

Because he wore a light suit, spattered with blood, and had a laceration on one hand, was not evidence that Albert Tracey of Commonwealth ave., Back Bay, was the man of like description who broke a window in a North end store, Judge Zottoli ruled in municipal court today.

Patrolman Augustus Gannon arrested Tracey after he had been notified to be on the watch for a culprit of the same description. The court found insufficient evidence on a charge of breaking glass, but found Tracey guilty of drunkenness.

First Edison 'Plant' Is Given to Ford

Parsippany, N. J., June 22 (AP)—Standing in the shade of the structure, Henry Ford today formally received from the General Electric Company the small wooden building in which Thomas A. Edison's first electric light bulb was blown.

Edison looked on during the ceremonies and received the original key to the shed-like building from the hands of Ford.

The structure, which is about 20 feet by 40 and one and one-half stories high, was moved to this place from Menlo Park, its original site, for the presentation ceremonies. When it reaches Dearborn it will be erected on the same earth on which it stood at Menlo Park, 30 carloads having been shipped to the museum.

Francis Jahl, one of the few surviving members of the Edison laboratory force, will be in charge of the building's erection, and replacement of original equipment and instruments on its benches.

PEN DEATH THREAT TO MORROW

He said he hoped to go today to his country home at Cuernavaca to rest over the week-end.

Generally speaking the ambassador's popularity has been increased many times by the hand he has taken in the church negotiations. He was referred to here today on every side as one of the world's greatest diplomats. Many Catholics are inclined to credit him with the final success in the negotiations, stating that had it not been for his mediation the conferences would have been broken down.

FIRST MASS JUNE 29.

Mexicans, moved to happiness as three years ago they watched with foreboding, crowded to the cathedral today to give thanks for settlement of the nation's bitter religious strife.

Flowers were heaped high around the altar at the Church of Nuestra Senora de la Guadalupe, near the Capitol, the bank offering of a now smiling people to their patron saint. Some of the blossoms were brought from as far as the floating gardens at Zochimilco.

While the government moved fast to permit return of churches and church property to the clergy for the first mass June 29, the bishops themselves assumed arrangements to bring the country's priests back to their parishes.

Archbishop Ruiz y Flores of Michoacan, who with Bishop Pascual Diaz of Tabasco, completed the religious accord with President Gil said they had accepted the offer of Pere Missour Lacombe of the Pacific Ry. for a special train in which the priests might return together to Mexico. Bishop Gerardo Anaya of San Antonio, where the train probably would be made up, will have charge.

TO HONOR PRESIDENT.

Plans were already afoot today for a monster nation-wide demonstration July 1 to President Portes Gil for his having brought the world's settlement which, without destroying the structure of Mexico's revolutionary social gains, will permit the priests to return to their flocks.

The first mass probably will be said at the site of the Virgin, Guadalupe, June 29, day of St. Peter. The shrine is to the Mexican what Mecca is to the Mohammedan or The Ganges to the Hindu—literally tens of thousands would be on hand for the ceremony.

The next service would be in the great Mexico City bull ring, standing directly over the spot where once was the old Teocali, or sacrificial temple at which Hernando Cortez, four centuries ago, could watch the Aztecs cut out hearts from his living comrades.

4 Killed, 20 Wounded in Mexican Communist Battle

Mexico City, June 22 (AP)—A special dispatch to El Universal today from Atlixo, Puebla, said Socialist workers from the factories in Metepec and El Leon had attacked Communist workers from the factories in Metepec and El Polcan. Four were killed and 20 injured in the fray, which was considered a result of recently enacted labor rules. There were 28 arrests.

Foil Plot to Destroy the Altar in Mexican Church

Patuandiro, Michoacan, Mexico, June 22 (AP)—A group of agrarians were apprehended today while attempting to destroy the altar of La Higuerita Church in this city. Their act was believed due to disgruntlement at the agreement between the Government and the Catholic Church.

Vatican Rejoices as Pact Ends Bitter Mexican Conflict

Vatican City, June 22 (AP)—First word of the settlement of the Mexican religious controversy was given to the Vatican entourage today by the Associated Press, and the news was received with expressions of joy.

Even the closest collaborators of Cardinal Gasparri, papal secretary of state, had been kept in ignorance of the specific provisions of the terms of President Portes Gil and Archbishop Ruiz had agreed on.

Scientists Find Four New Sun Elements

Berkeley, Cal., June 22 (INS)—Discovery in the sun, 92,000,000 miles from the earth, of four more known encmical elements was revealed today before scientists attending the annual conference of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, Pacific division, at the University of California.

This, together with former discoveries, tends to prove that the composition of the sun is not unlike that of the earth, it was declared by Charles E. St. John of Mt. Wilson Observatory, Pasadena.

"There are 90 known elements and of these 58 have been found in the sun, he said. The newly discovered elements are atomic oxygen, nitrogen, oxygen and sulphur.

Elements common to the sun are iron, titanium, chromium, cobalt, nickel and vanedium, but of these iron is detected in abundance.

The Mt. Wilson observations indicate, he said, that magnesium, iron, soiocon, sodium, potassium and calcium, all abundant on the earth, are the elements most abundant in the sun.

MESSENGER IN ANSONIA ON GRILL AGAIN

A civilian messenger employed under contract with the Ansonia, Conn., postoffice, was requestioned today by federal inspectors investigating the theft of two registered mail pouches, one containing $68,000 in currency shipped from Boston, and the other $11,000 in checks.

Postoffice Inspectors John J. Breslin and Thomas Cronin, detailed by Chief Inspector Park D. Colvin to investigation of the theft, have made no official report, but are known to believe, on the basis of their progress so far, that it was a one-man "job."

They have determined that the money pouch, mailed from the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston to the Ansonia National Bank, arrived within 200 yards of the Ansonia postoffice and disappeared in Ansonia on or about 9.20 o'clock Wednesday morning.

The second pouch, they have determined, was stolen within 12 minutes of the first.

The man again questioned today is understood to have signed for three pouches dropped off at Ansonia from a Bridgeport train, but to have delivered only two at the postoffice. Efforts are being made to determine whether anyone was seen near his truck parked at the station.

The same messenger took the pouch of checks from the postoffice to the Ansonia railroad station, along with several other pouches, and returned soon after, reporting he had missed the train.

It was then discovered that the pouch of checks had been stolen from his truck somewhere on the round trip between station and postoffice.

338 Students Sail on Training Cruise

Three hundred and thirty-eight students of four colleges, members of the Naval Reserve Officers' Training Corps, sailed from Boston today aboard the battleships Wyoming and New York on the corps' third annual cruise, which will terminate at the navy yard July 11.

The Wyoming carried 70 Harvard and 40 Dartmouth students in charge of Comdr. E. M. Woodson. Aboard the New York were 110 Georgia Tech and 70 Yale students under Lieut.-Comdr. P. R. Weaver.

Says He Drank Bay Rum, Canned Heat

Daniel Sullivan, who admitted he had no home but claimed ownership of 25 pairs of socks found upon him, revealed in municipal court today the ingredients of the "punch" drinks which rendered him incapable of standing in the dock. They were canned heat and bay rum. He welcomed a six months sentence for larceny of the socks from a Washington st. haberdasher.

Vermont Man Faces Prison as Smuggler

St. Albans, Vt., June 22 (AP)—Myron Britch of Highgate Center today was under sentence of a year and a day at the Atlanta federal penitentiary for smuggling aliens into the United States. He was captured by immigration patrolmen with three aliens women who had crossed the border illegally. The women, one a native of Esthonia, and the others of Poland, told authorities they paid $100 each to a Montreal smuggling ring.

Love Plans Oft Gang Aglee

BLOCKED BY 2 HOUSEBOATS, MAYOR TOLD

Protesting that their swimming hole is blocked, 20 Beachmont children petitioned Mayor Andrew A. Casassa of Revere today to have two houseboats removed from the beach between Pearl ave. and Orchard st.

The houseboats according to the petition, which was received by the Mayor through the mail, have been "parked" for four years and have not been used by anybody in all that time.

The swimming hole in question has a sandy bottom and has no undertow to endanger the children.

Boy Thug Uses Gun and Club on Druggist

Providence, June 22—Shot at and clubbed by a boy bandit, who fled without securing any money, Fred Bedrosian, 30, proprietor of a Cranston drugstore, was in a serious condition at St. Joseph hospital today.

James Motis, ex-policeman and store proprietor of Pawtucket, halted a midnight robbery by two youths when he knocked them down. Later, one escaped from the grasp of Patrolman William Doyle. The other said he was Joseph Laro of Fall River.

'WHERE NOBODY CARES' SCORES AID ILL BOY

New York, June 22 (INS)—They call it the city where nobody cares but—

There is a 14-year-old youngster, George Mosher, who is today hovering between life and death from the dread tropical black fever.

George is out of luck. His father is incapacitated through an accident. His mother is dead. There is no money to provide blood transfusions which is urgent if George is to live.

HUNDREDS TO AID.

It is a strange disease, technically called Kala-azar, and is the only known case in this country. The malady destroys the red corpuscles. A public call for volunteers to give their blood to the dying lad was sounded.

And the city where they say nobody cares responded. Hundreds telephoned, wired and wrote they would be willing to give their blood.

"George's case has touched me," wrote Kane. "I am willing to give him as many transfusions as he needs to make him as well and healthy boy. Of course, I do not want a red cent for anything I can do."

$500 FUND RAISED

Contributions amounting to date to $500 have been received at the Seaside Hospital, Staten Island, to aid George.

Two wealthy men offered to pay full medical expenses.

A childish voice called the hospital on the phone and asked whether a collection taken up by the pupils of Jamestown high school for George should be mailed or sent by telegraph.

FAMILIES FLEE WEST END FIRE

A score of families, living in a four-story apartment house in Parkman st., West End, were forced to flee through thick smoke today when fire was discovered in an apartment on the fourth floor.

Capt. James A. McDevitt of Joy st. police station said he would call upon the state police to make an investigation to determine the cause of the fire. He said he believed it was of suspicious origin.

The blaze, according to police, started in an apartment occupied by Antonio Scooterio. When the firemen arrived flames had worked through the roof and were belching from the windows on the top floor.

According to police, Scooterio and his wife both work and had left their home during the early hours of the morning. No one was in their apartment when the fire was discovered and it was destroyed.

SHE WINS OWN LIGHT FIGHT

With certain specified conditions to be complied with, the Public Utilities Commission today ordered the Edison Electric Illuminating Company to supply current to Caroline C. Berghaus of Abbotsford ter., Dorchester.

The conditions are that the company obtain a location for a pole in King st. and the petitioner grant the company the right to erect and maintain a pole on her premises so the wires may be carried from King st. to the premises without wires passing over any portion of any other person's land off of Abbotsford ter.

CYANIDE DEATH CLUES FAIL TO SOLVE CASE

The mystery of the "cyanide cocktail" which Dwight Underwood, Tech senior, drank before he was found dead in his Back Bay room, deepened today with the declaration of police that the poison did not come from the summer home of a Boston business man.

Sergt. Walter French of Back Bay police interviewed members of the family and their servants and was told that cyanide was never in the house.

While in Manchester-by-the-Sea, the summer home of this family, French took a sample of a bottle labeled "vermouth," a bottle similar in all ways to the one found on a table in the youth's hall bedroom, except that the latter was a mixture of cyanide and vermouth.

This sample was analyzed at a Boston hospital today and the report stated the contents were vermouth, non-alcoholic and with no trace of poison.

In view of the circumstances surrounding Underwood's death, Associate Medical Examiner W. H. Watters has referred the matter to the municipal court and the evidence will be presented at an inquest Thursday.

While the police are inclined to discount the theory of foul play, they are unable to prove either suicide or accident until they learn the origin of the cyanide.

Oris Underwood, brother of the dead student, returned from the funeral in Buffalo to devote himself to solving the mystery of his brother's death. He is convinced that Underwood did not take his own life.

CHILDREN OF E. BOSTON IN SAFETY DRIVE

Led by President Alexander Sullivan of the East Boston Betterment Association, several thousand boys and girls of East Boston paraded through that section today to promote the association's safety campaign.

The children were given a free show at the Central Square Theater and were then addressed on safety measures by Congressman John J. Douglass and Michael J. Downey, assistant superintendent of schools.

A parade, from Orient Heights to the airport, will be staged tomorrow as the final feature of the campaign. Throughout the week, lectures were given in the schools by members of the association, which is campaigning for better playgrounds and beaches in East Boston so that the children will have better places to play and swim, thus keeping them off the streets and out of danger.

Wilson Names 19 New Boston Police

2 CONFESS 'HIS CRIME,' SOBS CONVICT

Sobbing with emotion, William Rolfe, serving 25 to 30 years for armed robbery, told the State board of advisory pardons today that two other convicts had confessed to him their guilt in the crimes for which he is convicted.

Rolfe declared he never had a pistol and asserted he was at his sister's house in South Boston on the night of the robberies which occurred in Malden and Wakefield in November, 1925.

He gave Chairman Frank A. Brooks the names of the two prisoners who he said had confessed and said they had since been transferred to Concord reformatory.

He said they at first volunteered to make affidavits absolving him but later wanted some assurances they would not have to serve his term.

A Wakefield policeman, Gervase E. Stanley, was called by Atty. Thomas H. Resnahan as a witness for Rolfe, and he told of giving chase to an automobile containing three men on the night of the robbery for which Rolfe was sentenced.

Stanley said he overtook the car when it was wrecked but the men got away by swimming Lake Quannapowitt. Asked by Asst. Dist. Atty. Crafts if another auto was not stolen that night and found abandoned in South Boston, the policeman said that was true.

The hearing was held at State Prison and among spectators were Mrs. Esther M. Andrews of the Governors Council and Mrs. Glendower Evans, society philanthropist. This was the second session and the hearing is now completed.

CONCERTS ON ESPLANADE PLANNED

Open air concerts by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra which are likely to add luster to the Hub's renown as a music center will be given almost nightly over a period of five weeks on the Charles river esplanade, beginning July 4, it was announced today.

The concerts are sponsored by prominent Bostonians and there will be no charge to the public.

Arthur Fiedler, member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, a frequent conductor of the Pop concerts and a native Bostonian, has been chosen as conductor of the open air presentations, which will be known as the Esplanade Concerts.

The outdoor concerts are admittedly an experiment, but if they prove popular and artistically successful they will probably become an annual event.

Forty-six members of the Boston Symphony will participate.

The concerts will be given from a stand which the metropolitan district authorities are erecting at the foot of Chestnut st., near the Union Boat clubhouse. They will take place from 8 to 10 o'clock each evening from July 4 to Aug. 8, with the exception of July 8, 14, 22 and 29 and Aug. 4.

Fiedler is the son of Emmanuel Fiedler, who was a Boston Symphony player for 25 years and also one of the original members of the famous Kneisel quartet. The son is a graduate of Boston Latin school and the Royal Academy of Music at Berlin, and is organizer of the Boston Symphonietta, or Little Symphony Orchestra.

250 M. P.'S FOR LOCAL OPTION

London, June 22 (INS)—Two hundred and fifty members of all parties in the new British House of Commons—more than one-third of the total membership—are pledged to work for "local option," the English name for the half-way house to national prohibition.

This declaration was made to International News Service today by H. Cecil Heath, general secretary of the United Kingdom Alliance, powerful temperance organization which is working for the suppression of the liquor traffic by the will of the people.

Newton Man Raps U. S. Reserve Board

Spokane, June 26 (AP)—The Federal Reserve Bank was criticised by Dr. William T. Foster, noted economist, in an address here for its alleged "vacillating policy of blowing first hot and then cold, thereby keeping the whole world of commerce and finance in a state of nervous apprehension." Dr. Foster, who is connected with the Pollak Foundation for Economic Research at Newton, Mass., was the principal speaker at the Washington State Bankers convention.

MISS KATHARINE ADAMS MARRIED TODAY IN HISTORIC KING'S CHAPEL

Society Also Turns Out to See Miss Constance Vaillant and Miss Eileen Park Wed

MANY FAMOUS PERSONAGES BEARING THE honored name of Adams have worshipped and wedded within historic old King's Chapel. And today another born to that cognomen evoked memories of other brides before its altar as Miss Katharine Adams moved past its time-stained pews on the arm of her father, Karl Adams of Beacon st., to wed Hamilton Heard. The ceremony was solemnized at 4 o'clock with all the pomp and circumstance becoming this lovely young daughter of distinguished ancestry and exalted social position. The Rev. Endicott Peabody of Groton and the Rev. Howard N. Brown performed the rites before a chosen company of the brides and her parent's contemporaries.

MISS EVELYN AMES, OF BAY STATE RD., attends as maid of honor, and the bridesmaids will be Miss Sylvia Weld of Chestnut Hill, Miss Alice Graves of Boston, Miss Carolyn Samson of Brookline, Mrs. William C. Gray of Sarah Knowles of Dedham, Miss Alice Shaw of Morristown, N. S., and Miss Jane Acheson of Pittsburgh. Charles Steward Heard attended his brother as best man. The wedding reception was scheduled to follow immediately at the home of the bride at 36 Beacon st. Miss Adams planned her nuptials a bit differently by having her bridal party as guests at the Harvard-Yale boat race yesterday—another truly Adams gesture, since no event connect with Harvard is neglected by an Adams. The couple are to live at Groton after October 1.

Miss Katharine Adams, popular member of the Junior League and the Chilton Club, wedded Hamilton Heard this afternoon in historic King's Chapel before a distinguished gathering. (Staff photo.)

AT THE SAME HOUR MISS CONSTANCE VAILLANT, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Vaillant of Commonwealth ave., looked out at her flower-decked world from bridal veil in St. John's Church, in Washington Ct., where she was ushered into wedlock with Dr. Benjamin Tenney, Jr., before a large Boston society contingent. Illustrious names on the bridesmaid and usher list for this wedding include that of her sister, Miss Marion Vaillant as maid of honor, and Miss Lorraine Lesson, Boston, Miss Natalie Shipman of Hartford, Mrs. William Byrd of New York (Alice Lucet), and Mrs. Charles Mason of New York, formerly Miss Polly Wallace. Dr. Tenney had Dr. Montgomery Blair, Jr., as his best man. Mrs. George H. Vaillant, the bride-elect's grandmother, opened her home in Washington for the wedding reception.

STILL ANOTHER BRIDE SET sail on the matrimonial sea at 4 o'clock with Boston guests at an out-of-town wedding. She was Miss Eileen Park, daughter of Dr. John Edgar Park, president of Wheaton College, and Mrs. Park, who became the bride of Richard William Howell in Wheaton College Chapel. This ceremony will be long remembered as a real "college wedding" with the bridal attendants from various institutions of learning. Miss Rosemary Park of Radcliffe did maid-of-honor duties, Miss Janet Howell of Walnut Hill school, Natick, Miss Beatrice Park, House in the Pines, Norton, Miss Doris Sargent, Wellesley, Miss Winona Boutwell, Andover, Miss Doris Wilkerson, of Katharine Gibbs school, Boston, and Miss Grace O'Brien, Marblehead, were the bridesmaids. Thomas Kedions of Belmont was best man. A wedding trip to Canada precedes the establishment of their home in Framingham.

ROMANCE RIDES IN THE AIR mail when wedding plans the between Boston to Palo Alto, Calif. And it is via this route that Boston friends learn of the date of the nuptials of Miss Charlotte Reynolds of the Golden State and Henry N. Pratt of Beacon st., set for July 24. In the gloaming on that date these two will exchange their vows in the rose scented garden of the Reynolds estate. Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence O. Pratt (Frances Wood) whose own wedding was a recent society event, will attend the couple. The wedding is to be an important society event of the month in the university town where the bride-elect attended the Leland Sanford.

SEVEN COHASSET GARDENS, in the full glory of June blossoming, are to be opened to the public Monday afternoon, July 1, when members of the Cohasset Garden Club point out the results of months of planning and careful cultivation in the interests of beautified landscapes. Personally conducted parties will start from the Cohasset Yacht Club at 2, 3 and 4 o'clock for the round of gardens. Those to be shown include that of Mrs. Hugh Bancroft, Mrs. William H. Brown, Mrs. Charles F. Cutler, Mrs. Roger C. Hatch, Mrs. Carl T. Keller, Mrs. Henry Pennell and Mrs. T. F. Stoddard.

ANOTHER AMORY ARRIVED for the social register of Boston when a son joined the family circle of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Amory of New Bedford, June 20. Mrs. Amory was Miss Elizabeth Cole before her marriage several years ago. There is another small son, now about five years old, in the Amory home. From Cohasset comes news of the arrival of a daughter for Mr. and Mrs. Edward Hastings, born last Monday. Mrs. Hastings was formerly Miss Virginia Blackmur.

THE TRAVEL CHRONICLE finds Dr. and Mrs. George Clymer of Bay State road London-bound aboard the Minnetonka, leaving New York with a capacity passenger list. Miss Emily Howe and her mother, Mrs. Walter C. Howe, leave on the Cedric tomorrow from Boston for England to spend the summer. Dr. Howe and Frederick E. Howe go to Cape Breton as usual, this season. Mrs. Horace Gray of Mt. Vernon st. is making the Hotel Gladstone in New York her headquarters during a brief visit in that city.

MAY BUILDING SHOWS GAIN

Building permits issued in the 20 cities of the state during May aggregated $17,595,122 in value, a larger amount than in any one month since August, 1927.

In announcing the figures today the division of statistics in the state department of labor and industries also disclosed that in the 36 larger towns canvassed the total building permit value for the same month was $2,588,596, bringing the combined value of the 55 municipalities up to $20,183,828.

Compared with April, the $20,183,828 representing an increase of 25 per cent, the increase in the cities being 21 per cent, with a decrease of 4.5 per cent in the towns. The cities' record for May this year also represents a 37 per cent increase over the figures in the corresponding month in 1928.

New residential building in May this year accounted for $8,721,067 of the $20,183,828 total. Of the balance, $7,839,503 went into new non-residential building and $3,602,853 into additions, alterations and repairs. The new residential buildings in Boston will provide accommodations for 499 families.

Among the larger Boston projects reported are: Atlantic National Bank, $1,000,000; medical building, Boston City Hospital, $2,750; nurses' home, Children's Hospital $500,000; new nurse's home, Boston Lying-in Hospital, and additions to two buildings, $850,200; one apartment house with club facilities, $500,000; one warehouse in South Boston for the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company, $400,000; F. W. Woolworth Co., new store, Washington and Bedford sts., $375,000; Central fire station, Bowdoin sq., $320,000.

Girl Lawyer's Tears Break Up Court Trial

New York, June 22 (INS)—A blonde Portia broke down so much she was adjourned until Monday. Freida Hennock is counsel for Harry Knepp, once had license on trial for killing a negro admirer. The prosecutor made a cutting remark as Counsel Hennock was examining a witness. "You are always interrupting me," said Miss Hennock, breaking into tears. "You are trying to upset me." The judge adjourned court.

Mayor Invites Club Leaders to Dedication of Hospital

AT the invitation of Mayor Malcolm E. Nichols, Massachusetts Federation of Women's Clubs executives will be special guests of the city at the dedication of the new Children's Hospital Building at Long Island, Boston Harbor, next Thursday.

Of the 700 invitations issued, 400 have been sent to club leaders throughout the State and more particularly to those women who guide and inspire the club life of Greater Boston.

As a connecting link between the Federation and the city, Mrs. William J. McDonald, sixth district director, has had charge of the arrangements for the clubwomen and is assisting Mrs. Nichols in welcoming the women to the island that they might become more acquainted with Boston's treatment of this side of the humanity problem.

In fact it is the desire of Mayor Nichols to acquaint the club leaders with the city's program in meeting the conditions and problems of the poor, particularly the children, at these exercises, and this means of information will prove fruitful, he hopes.

The Massachusetts Federation is the only organization that has been invited to attend as an organization. Mrs. Arthur A. Packard, State president and Mrs. Arthur Devens Potter, General Federation director for Massachusetts, are expected to be present.

Many club presidents have expressed a desire to gain further insight into the city's handling of this question and no doubt their visit to Long Island next Thursday will inspire them to take up the work in conjunction with the Hub program.

Also the graduation exercises of the 1929 class of the long Island School of Nursing are to be held on the island at 3 p. m. William S. Kinney, commissioner of institutions, is to be one of the honored guests and will address the gathering.

Mrs. McDonald is to have charge of the ushering and will be assisted by Mrs. Nathaniel E. Smith.

STATE FEDERATION

At summer board meeting, held at headquarters, 687 Boylston st., at which Mrs. Packard, president, presided, new officers and directors for next year became acquainted with those who served the Federation long and well.

The new leaders were familiarized with Federation methods and how best to "put over" the Federation message.

Preliminary outlines of next year's program and activities were discussed and left for further consideration and final conclusions at the board meeting, which comes later in the season.

LAW CONVENTION

Federal Judge Genevieve R. Cline of Cleveland, Ohio, the only woman holding such a position in the world, is to be the guest of honor and principal speaker at the banquet tonight of the Kappa Beta Phi Legal Sorority, now in convention, at the Hotel Statler.

She arrived from New York and will remain until tomorrow.

Little sympathy has this grey-haired woman with those whose charge of "industrialized womanhood" is the prevailing cry.

Such charges have always been made, she says, and will continue to be made.

"Certain women like certain men are qualified to do certain jobs and when they possess such qualifications they should express their aptitudes," she said in an interview in her suite at the Statler.

SEEKING EQUALITY

There is no such thing as "lost femininity," she says, which we hear nowadays from every corner.

Instead, if a job is one demanding calculating coldness, it should be left to recruits. That does not take away from a woman the so-called femininity, the loss of which some critics are sending these days.

"Women today are seeking equality and they ask no favors or exceptions in making known their proficiency for the job," she said.

Judge Cline is unmarried and should she have her life to live over again she would pursue the same calling in the same fashion as she has in the attainment of so high and exalted a position which she now holds.

"I do not say that women should not get married," she said. "I say that for my temperament and desires, my life as I have led it is complete and full and sufficient. A girl should fit herself for her particular calling."

FOLLOW PARENTS

Independence is a fine trait in the new woman, she said.

As for emancipated womanhood, Judge Cline wouldn't even comment.

"Woman has been as she always was. Some have done things, others have not."

As for the youth of the country, she felt there was little to comment on.

"Young people today follow their parents and, if young people do things that haven't been done before, their parents, too, are doing things that parents didn't do before."

QUOTA CLUB

Members have a complimentary luncheon in the Engineers' Club for Mrs. Elizabeth J. White executive secretary of Quota International and Miss Isa Taylor, a director, both of Washington, D. C., who are in the city for a short visit.

Mrs. White and Miss Taylor are on their way to Worcester to attend the national convention of Quota International, which will be in session at the Hotel Bancroft from June 25 to 29.

Guests at the luncheon included most of the members of the club who plan to attend the convention next Thursday when Boston Quota Club is the hostess. President Bertha L. Goldthwaite of the Hub club and Elizabeth Ellam are the delegates, with Marion L. Godfrey, alternate.

MASSACHUSETTS WOMEN'S REPUBLICAN CLUB

At a special business meeting the members voted that the club take over full ownership of the club property at 46 and 47 Beacon st. Up to the present time the ownership has been held by a group of trustees, known as the 46 Beacon Street Trust.

Mrs. Franklin W. Hobbs, president, will head a group of members of the board of governors who will leave Boston next Monday for Newagen Inn, Newagen, Me., where they will be the guests of Mrs. Joshua L. Brooks of Springfield, a fellow board member.

With Mrs. Hobbs will go Mrs. Marion L. Higgins, Mrs. Julius Andrews, Mrs. Raymond A. Hopkins, Mrs. William S. Mitchell, Miss Rachel Morse, Mrs. George W. Perkins, Mrs. Joseph Soliday, Mrs. Nelson W. Howard, Mrs. Donald S. Blair.

PAID $5000 FOR CHARLES BASIN BILL 'LOBBY'

Lobby returns filed today at the State House disclose that Arthur W. Stevens of Boston paid a total of $5000 for legislative counsel services in connection with the bill calling for improvement of Charles River Basin.

The $5000, according to the return, was split between Attorneys Atherton N. Hunt and George P. Drury, advocates of the so-called speedway on the Beacon st. side of the basin, a feature finally eliminated from the bill.

Other returns showed Michael J. Mulkern, chairman of the state American Legion legislative committee, received no remuneration for his work on 25 bills the legion was interested in.

Frank A. Symonds received $808 from the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Engineers and Charles L. Davis received $1656 from the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers.

Hadley Falls Trust Company paid $200 to Green, Bennett and Lyon, the Central Massachusetts Light & Power Company paid David J. Donahue $35, and the Boston Real Estate Exchange paid Charles F. Rowley $350 for legislative services.

WOMEN'S PEACE RESOLVE IS COMPROMISED

Berlin, June 22 (AP)—The congress of teh Women's International Suffrage Alliance today smoothed the troubled waters caused by a clause in its peace resolution to which the French and Belgian delegations objected by passage at a new resolution embodying a France-German compromise.

The cause to which the French, Belgians and Dutch objected put the congress on record as opposed to "military oppressions" in a phraseology which those delegations felt they could not accept. The resolution, introduced by Miss Ruth Morgan of New York, was carried over protest by a slight plurality.

Miss Morgan declared that the new resolution today "resolved a difficulty which might face any two nations and which must be faced if we are to have peace."

The resolution was approved by all the edelegations except the Egyptians. The new text of the paragraph against military occupation of territory was prepared in a hastily called conference of the French and German delegates. It urged "that in the whole world all measures of oppression shall cease, whether economic, military, political or intellectual."

COURT MARTIAL FOR FOUHY

A court-martial was assembled at the State House to consider the case of Capt. Leo A. Fouhy of the Wagon Company of the 26th Division, M. N. G., of Charlestown.

The court comprised Col. George G. Moze, 182d Infantry, president; Maj. Henry I. Spencer, 211th Coast Artillery; Maj. Philip L. Brown, 110th Cavalry; Col. Frank J. Killen, United States disbursement officer, and Maj. Edward E. Pelier, 182d Infantry. Lieut. Harold J. Smith of 26th Tank Company was prosecutor.

After the court had convened, Maj. Frederick Breen of the governor's staff, representing the defendant, challenged the president on the ground that he had talked of the case with Brig. Jean P. W. Poirer. The court sustained the defense and adjournment was taken to next Wednesday at 2 p. m. In the meantime a new member will be appointed in place of Colonel Moyer.

No formal charge has yet been made against Captain Fouhy in the trial and neither the court nor the prosecutor would make them known.

Actress and Flier Must Marry Again

Los Angeles, June 22 (AP)—Priscilla Dean, motion picture actress, and Leslie P. Arnold, former army aviator, who were married last September in Tiajuana, Mexico, announced here that they had separated, but that they extended the parting to lead to a remarriage as soon as it is legally possible.

Gould's Casino Is Run at $800,000 Loss

Nice, France, June 22 (AP)—Frank Jay Gould's Casino de la Mediterranee, Riviera gambling palace, has lost $800,000 in the last five months, official statistics show. Gould, who is the youngest son of the last century American railroad magnate, Jay Gould, paid $5,000,000 for his Casino building alone.

Youth Badly Burned When Gas Explodes

William Logue, 17, of 19 Lark st., South Boston, was painfully burned about the back and shoulders when an explosion occurred while he was cleaning his automobile with gasoline. He was taken to the Carney Hospital, where his name is on the danger list.

KING ALFONSO

. . . . is a royal contradiction

Sportsman, democrat, ruler . . . a king who has been able to throw off the shackles of his empire, yet requires an army to protect him—a man whose infectious smile contradicts his typical Hapsburg nose!

Personality, extraordinary, says Archibald Henderson, a man who probably knows more about the outstanding personalities of the world than any other individual. And in his characterization of the picturesque monarch, he has brought us an interpretation that inspires the echo, "Long Live the Spanish King!"

Who are the world's most vivid personalities?

Archibald Henderson, famous author, historian, and biographer, has answered this question in his series of articles portraying the twelve most vivid personalities. King Alfonso is one of the twelve, he says. Do not miss his brilliant analysis of the Spanish monarch!

HUBBY NABBED WITH HIS 3D BRIDE

Springfield, June 22—After a search of several months for the runaway husband of a girl who is soon to become a mother, Miss Myrtle McKenzie, local welfare worker, today found him just wedded to another girl in Palmer.

The alleged bigamous bride groom, Maurice Hebert, 23, was arrested by Police Chief Crimmons of Palmer, on complaint of Miss McKenzie.

Hebert, according to the police, admitted having three "wives" and as a result he was formally charged with polygamy.

When Hebert pleaded guilty in Palmer District Court, Judge Bullock declined jurisdiction because he said the maximum sentence which he could impose, two and a half years, was not sufficient punishment. He bound the defendant over to the Grand Jury in $2500 bail.

Hebert, who formerly lived in Goffstown, N. H., was being sought as the husband of Ella Mae Matthews of this city. The welfare worker learned of the marriage of a youth of the same name to Miss Goldie Smith of Palmer three days ago, and she went and identified him, aided by Rev. Walter O. Terry of Warren, the officiating clergyman.

After his arrest Hebert is said to have stated that he first married Ella May Lord at Peterboro N. H., in 1924 and deserted her in 1928 at Athol. He met Miss Matthews at Lenox and was wed to her last fall.

Police learned he went to Palmer two months ago, obtained employment from George W. Smith grandfather of Goldie Smith, and went to live at Smith's house. It was there that his arrest took place.

INCOME TAX CUT SEEN IN VAST SURPLUS

Washington, June 22—The government will end the fiscal year June 30 with a treasury surplus approximating $200,000,000, brightening the prospect for early reduction of taxes on current incomes, it appeared today.

Vastly increased collections of individual income taxes are chiefly responsible.

March income tax collections, individual and corporate, were about $50,000,000 larger than the year before. June collections, thus far, are $150,000,000 larger.

No extraordinary sum is to be spent before June 30, except for a $45,000,000 payment to the railroads, and this is expected to leave the surplus figure around $200,000,000.

The tax reduction on earned incomes appears to have a clear right of way, once the administration is assured the budget is in shape to permit it. Both President Hoover and Secretary Mellon have approved the plan. An overwhelming demand for the reduction has been voiced in a nation-wide movement sponsored by the Hearst newspapers.

FLYING BOATS FOR HUB-N. Y. SERVICE

An all-air flying boat service between Boston and New York, cutting down the time of the present air trip by 70 minutes, is to be inaugurated Monday, it was learned today.

One of three mammoth twin-motored Savoia-Marchetti flying boats is scheduled to leave the Hudson river at West 65th st., and descend in Boston Harbor at 11 o'clock Monday morning, inaugurating a regular daily service.

According to present plans the ship will descend on the water off the Boston Airport and the passengers will be taken by speedboat to the public landing on the rear of South Station, a five-minute run.

The new line will be run by the Arrvis Transportation Co., of New York, and William J. Coughlin of Dorchester and Hull will handle the speedboat end here.

The new line will be the first all-air service between the two cities, passengers being transported from the heart of one to the heart of the other, without the necessity of making trips to and from flying fields by bus.

All details of the service have not been worked out, such as fare and time schedules, but it is expected they will have been decided by Monday.

Present plans provide for the anchoring of a barge off the airport, where passengers will be disembarked. Coughlin's speedboats will rush them to the public landing, a five-minute trip, and they will then be in the heart of the city.

At the other end an even greater time saving will be effected, as passengers will board and leave the flying boats at West 47th st., eliminating the long trip to Newark and return.

New Yellow Fever Discoveries Made

Hamilton, Ont., June 22 (AP)—Important advances in the study of yellow fever as the result of the recent expedition to Nigeria under the auspices of the Rockefeller Institute are intimated by C. A. Mortell, member of the expedition who has returned to his home in this city. The young scientist, a graduate of the University of Toronto, said he was not at liberty to discuss the experiment.

Walks Away With Theater Carpet

Paris, June 21 (INS)—Collectors of hotel towels, restaurant cutlery and the latest magazines from dentists' waiting rooms are out-done by a new-fangled lifter. The new wrinkle is to walk off with the carpet. This is considered a much more sporting proposition because of the difficulties involved. One "lifter" stole a local theater carpet.

SEEK SPEECH FOR 6 MUTES IN FLIGHTS

New York, June 22 (INS)—In an attempt to discover whether lost speech may be restored in certain cases through a flight in an aeroplane, the American Society for Promotion of Aviation today announced six persons who have lost the use of their vocal chords within the last four years would be put through the test.

These subjects will be put through a series of loops, rolls, dives, spins and other maneuvers which would tend to shock them to such an extent that the use of their vocal chords possibly might be regained.

Capt. J. O. Donaldson and pilots of the Newark Air Service will cooperate.

Dr. Ermin L. Ray and Dr. W. J. Francis, medical examiners for the Department of Commerce believe that if disease or defect of the vocal chords prevails the curing of this condition by airplane stunting would be impossible.

However, if the source of trouble is from an hysterial suppression of speech, the fright that the patient might undergo during aerial manuevers might serve to bring back use of the vocal organs, it was said.

ARREST ONE IN RAID ON CLUB

When Sergt. William McKenzie and the headquarters liquor squad battered their way into the Sylvia Club on the seventh floor at 446 Washington st., they found a small sign hanging over the bar, which read, "Open Sunday."

Don't believe in signs. It won't.

When the squad entered the room they found 12 men seated around tables reading. They found a small quantity of liquor behind the bar and took Michael Cochran into custody.

Kerry a "Stowaway" to See Divorced Wife

New York, June 22 (AP)—Ab ard the liner Majestic en route to Europe today is Norman Kerry, motion picture actor, without ticket, passport or baggage in an attempt to effect a reconciliation with his divorced wife. Kerry, arriving as the liner was about to sail, was prevented from ascending the gangplank, but boarded the ship astride a wardrobe trunk on an escalator which conveys luggage into the hold.

Medicine Men Free Indian in Murder

Miami, Fla., June 22 (AP)—The Seminole high council of medicine men, sitting in solemn conclave deep in the Everglades, acquitted Josie Billie of the murder of the widowed Squaw Nuf-Che, according to information gleaned from stolid members of the tribe when returned to the Musa Isle Indian village here today.

Hoover on Way, Fish Best Beware

Boys' Planes Fly

Detroit, June 22 (AP)—The boys are getting clever with model airplanes. The monoplane of Joseph Culver of Oakland, Cal., remained in the air 8 minutes and .3 seconds in an indoor tournament. Outdoors that of Donald C. Burnham of West Lafayette, Ind., stayed up 10 minutes 30 seconds.

They Eat the Evidence in Tariff Hearing

Washington, June 22 (AP)—Witnesses appearing before the Senate finance sub-committee, holding hearings on the agricultural schedule of the House tariff bill, have found a way to hold the interest of committeemen despite the hot weather. They feed them exhibits.

Irritation brought on by the heat and the rising lists of figures faded perceptibly as fancy cherries from Italy, cashew nuts from India and other tasty samples introduced, along with tariff briefs by importers and domestic growers, were tested in large quantities by the senators.

"Have a pignolia, Sam; Pat says they're good," Senator Watson, Indiana, chairman, addressed Sen. Shortridge of California.

Shortridge had one, so did Senator Smoot, Utah. Before long a pound box had disappeared under the senatorial belts.

"How is it we can't grow these in California? They appear to be able to grow most everything," Senator Pat Harrison, Mississippi, asked Senator Shortridge.

"Too busy growing other things and haven't got around to them yet," Sam replied, as more evidence blotted out irritation and spoiling appetites for dinner.

Boy Thieves Traced by Bike Tire Trail

Calais, Me., June 22—A trail of new bicycle tire treads followed for 24 miles by City Marshal Robert C. Kerr and Patrolman Roy Foley proved the undoing of two brothers today on charges of stealing the bicycle and a small sum of money. The boys, Roy W. Riley, 18, and Everett F. Riley, 15, both of 29th st., New York, pleaded guilty in the local court. The theft was at Phinney's bicycle shop. The arrests were made at North Perry.

Check Passer Asks for a Sanity Test

New York, June 22 (INS)—"Your Honor, there's something wrong with me. I think I should be given a sanity test." That's what Albert Brandt, 39, a Brooklyn motion picture operator, said today when arraigned before Magistrate Marvin on a charge of passing a worthless check for $110 in payment for a diamond ring. After looking over Brandt's record, he has been arrested seven times—Magistrate Marvin placed him under observation.

DEMANDS U. S. BAR TROTZKY

Washington, June 22 (INS)—A vigorous protest against any consideration being given Leon Trotzky's desire to return to the United States was lodged with Secretary of Labor Davis today by Representative Albert Johnson (R.), Washington, chairman of the House immigration committee.

"It is preposterous," Johnson said, "that this man, who left this country and denounced it, and who reached such a position of power in Russia that his word brought death to millions, should seek reentry to the country he damned."

Johnson was assured the chances of Trotzky's being permitted into the United States are next to nil.

Lynn Man, 78, Hit by Medford Auto, Dies

Daniel J. Donovan, 78, of Lewis st., Lynn, was fatally injured while crossing Lynn Shore Drive when an automobile operated by Robert S. Twombley of Century st., West Medford, struck and hurled him several feet. The aged man died later in Lynn Hospital. 'King Saul's' Suicide Is Almost Too Real Washington, June 22 (AP)—Edward Sewell, negro janitor and amateur actor, is credited with one of the most realistic interpretations of the King Saul suicide scene an audience at the Mount Zion African Methodist Church ever saw.

Sewell was playing King Saul in a play called "Men of the Bible." He was equipped with a crown, regal robes, white sandals, and a three-foot saber. He reached his big moment in a scene in which "Saul" was supposed to stab himself.

The idea, Sewell explained after a physician stopped an alarming flow of blood and took several stitches in the wound, was to let the sword pass between his body and arm. But his arm got in the way.

"I sure did hurt, boss," he said. "But Ah didn't let the people know nothin' 'bout it.

"Ah'm gwin do King Saul ag'in in a couple o' weeks, but Ah'm gwin do some practising on my aim fust."

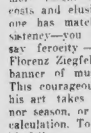
ZIEGFELD BLAZES TRAIL

By Nicholas Young

DOWN through the ages has been heard the martial tread of the torch-bearers—hold men of infinite purpose. The drama has had its share of these venturesome crusaders, but in the more recent days of high costs and elusive talent, no one has matched the persistency—you might almost say ferocity — with which Florenz Ziegfeld flaunts the banner of musical comedy. This courageous captain of his art takes neither time, nor season, or expense into calculation. To be held up to his fellows as unrivaled monarch of musical play production is an amiable purpose. Mr. Ziegfeld appears to have appropriated the crown—jewels and all.

• • •

JUST when the Glorified American Girl of the Ziegfeld retinue had laid plans for fair days at the beaches and happy nights in cosy nooks, Mr. Ziegfeld breaks out in a rash of mid-summer activity. Just the valiant torch-bearer again! This time it is "Show Girl." J. P. McEvoy's lively story, dramatized musicalizes and put into such sprightly dancing form that the tired business man will spring into new life as the shades of evening descend. "Show Girl" is Mr. Ziegfeld's hot weather opus. Other producers may lay aside their tools during these sizzling days, but not Ziegfeld. He merely calls for relays of fresh linen and bids the show go on.



Nicholas Young

AS in the case of "Show Girl," which will have its premiere at the Colonial on Tuesday, Mr. Ziegfeld on other occasions has made Boston the producing depot for his wares. These experiments, while artistically encouraging, have laid a heavy hand upon the Ziegfeldian exchequer. It had been rumored that Mr. Ziegfeld would have no more of Boston as a port of embarkation for his productions. Extravagant demands by the native toilers who manipulate scenery, and musicians who labor only in the cause of art and death-defying contracts jostled Mr. Ziegfeld, it is reported, into the unhappy role of a man toting an empty bag.

• • •

THE single week of "Show Girl" will undoubtedly relieve Mr. Ziegfeld's mind of any pestering doubts on the subject. It is to be expected that a capacity week will be returned by the box office charts—totaling in round numbers something like $40,000. Yet the week of "Show Girl" is more than likely to reward its producer with substantial financial loss. As a demonstration in cause and effect, this nearly explains the ills of the theater. Staggering costs in mechanical equipment and operation, a general staff of lyricists, punsters and directors, with a small army of musicians tightly stitched to the salary list, tell a sad story of rough sledding undeserved. And through it all, Florenz Ziegfeld remains serene and contented—but always fidgeting with the check book.

FEMININE CHARM MAKES NEW OFFERINGS THE MORE ALLURING

LOVE DOOMS as well as blesses, as Fay Wray's role sets forth in "Thunderbolt," at the Metropolitan. Her old romance triumphs.

GRACE HAYES lends her lure to the all-star bill at the New B. F. Keith's, she being a performer that knows all her onions.

SWISS STUFF, with none other than John Barrymore as the bold huntsman, and Camilla Horn as the lady in the case, in "Eternal Love" (Loew's State).

Witching Ways

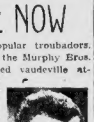
THEY'RE BACK HOME NOW

Vaudeville's popular troubadors, Brems, Fitz and the Murphy Bros. are the headlined vaudeville attraction at the Scollay Square. They are a comparatively recent combination of two tried and proved teams. For a number of years Lew Brems and Dannie Fitz have been harmonizing in and around their native Boston, occasionally breaking forth into a vaudeville tour of the East. Similarly occupied and in the same locale were John and William Murphy. Being fellow Bostonians as well as fellow professionals, they struck up a friendship which led recently to their joining forces. Now they are back in their own home town.



Oscar Shaw

The feature film is "The Cocoanuts" in which appear the four Marx Brothers, Mary Eaton and Oscar Shaw. This is a farrical tale of the Florida land boom, filled with fun and action.

Land Boom Lure Gives Way as Stage Calls

Even real estate can't keep an old actor out of the limelight. For many years Landers Stevens was a prominent figure in West Coast theatrical circles. Then he heard the call of the Southern California land boom. At Glendale he invested in a huge tract of land. It was subdivided and when the big influx began, he reaped a golden harvest. More subdivisions followed and Stevens prospered further, the stage taking a more remote place in his thoughts.

But as talking pictures became the rage, Stevens let his real estate go for awhile, and now he is playing a part in "The Trial of Mary Dugan," Bayard Veiller's all-talking production of his own famous stage play, at Loew's Orpheum the coming week, with Norma Shearer, Lewis Stone, H. B. Warner and Raymond Hackett in the leading roles.

Ability Carried Her to Big Role in Films

Marguerite Churchill, who plays the feminine lead in the all-talking production, "The Valiant," now at the Modern and Beacon, does not owe her high rank in filmdom to luck, to influence or to "getting a break" while playing as an "extra"—as do some of the screen's leading women.

In fact, Miss Churchill never was an "extra" and earned her distinction by hard work and ability as an actress. When but 14 she won the Winthrop Ames Scholarship. During the next term she was awarded the Otto H. Kahn Scholarship. Soon she undertook ingenue roles and after a number of successful stage appearances was signed to a long term contract by Winfield Sheehan.

LAUDS RACE IN THEATER

The color line in the American theater has been erased. Such is the conviction of Jules Bledsoe, world famous negro baritone, who is the headline attraction at the New B. F. Keith's this week, direct from his starring appearances in Ziegfeld's "Show Boat."

"The American negro always has occupied a conspicuous place in the drama—plays have been fashioned around him; he has been dramatized and re-dramatized and set, until within a few years ago he was always revealed on the stage through the medium of the white actor," says the actor.

"'Show Boat' in my estimation is a great play. It depicts a phase of American life that is picturesque and unique, but I do not think it would have been a great play if the negro characters had been portrayed by whites. It would have been artificial and unconvincing."

Grace Hayes and Neville Fleeson appear in "Song Photos," written by Mr. Fleeson. Scott Sanders, said to be the closest rival of Harry Lauder as a Scotch comedian, is making his American debut, coming here heralded as the "find" of the Continent. Teck Murdock, in "Tom, Dick and Harry," has a skit featuring Iris Kennedy, with a cast composed of Marion Meridith and Virginia Bell. One of the first "nut" acts of the season presents Hap Farnell and Florence in "For No Reason." The Four Ortons and Tyson Converse and Lorraine complete this bill.

"BOOM BOOM" AT WILBUR

The art of Frank McIntyre means a very great deal to "Boom Boom," the musical comedy at the Wilbur. The audience's favor is divided between the rotund and jovial Mr. McIntyre, the spontaneous personality of Neil Kelly, who gives the heroine a sense of humor, and the agile group of Jack Donahue-Jack Boyle dancers. Others in the large cast are Harold Conkling, Kendall Capps, Jane Alden, Brad Mitchell, Kitty Clark, Richard Loe, Archie Leach, Marcella Swanson, Harry Welsh, Cortez and Peggy, the Four Nightingales, also Bernard Smith and his orchestra.

OH, HO! FOR GYPSY LIFE

Out of his life and experience in Hungary Alexander Korda, the director, brought a touch of authenticity to "The Squall," which opens at the Washington St. Olympia and Fenway today. When the set designers were preparing the picturesque living room of the farmhouse in this story of gypsy life in Hungary, Korda brought forth several pictures of a house that actually existed near Transylvania. As was the custom in this region, the date of the erection of the house was not placed on a cornerstone or on the outside of the house; rather it was carved on the main ceiling beam of the living room, and on the underside of it, so that it was visible only to those who were guests of the house.

Zasu Pitts

In the case of the house in "The Squall," the date used was the one in the style characteristic of that country.

"The Squall" has an all-star cast, including Alice Joyce, Loretta Young, Carroll Nye, Zasu Pitts, Nicholas Soussanin, Knute Erickson, Myrna Loy, Richard Tucker, George Hackathorne, Harry Cording and Maria Harris.

It is based on the Caring stage play, "The Squall," by Jean Bart, which enjoyed a long stage run.

HE KNOWS ALL THE ROPES

Hobart Bosworth, character man who plays the role of the village pastor in John Barrymore's "Eternal Love," at Loew' State next week, is one of the few old-time stage stars who have attained conspicuous success on the screen. Bosworth ran away to sea at the age of 12. His experiences after that included sailing the seven seas, boxing, wrestling and ranching. In 1885, he made his first stage appearance in stock and traveled with various companies over the Pacific Coast and throughout Mexico. Making his way to New York, he became a member of the famous Augustin Daly Stock Co. After 10 years of dramatic work, including playing lends with Julia Marlowe, Mrs. Fiske, Henrietta Crosman and Amelia Bingham, his health broke and he went West again, this time fighting the "white plague" in Colorado and Arizona.

Hobart Bosworth

On his recovery in 1909, he joined the old Selig-Polyscope Co. as an actor, writer and director. In 1913 he formed his own company. The outstanding production of that venture was the picturization of Jack London's "The Sea Wolf."

He free-lanced for several years after that and then entered vaudeville, returning to pictures under the late Thomas Ince.

VITAPHONE "SHORTS"

The popularity of Vitaphone short subjects has led Warner Bros. to announce a regular release schedule of six acts a week during the new season. This will aggregate 312 numbers for the year, bringing to the screen the leading vaudeville, operatic and musical talent of the day.

REVERE TOPS THE BEST

Revere Beach has many new and novel attractions this year and, through the efforts of the amusement division of the Revere Chamber of Commerce special features are arranged weekly for the entertainment of the thousands who visit this popular seashore resort.

This season sees a new fun house patterned after the old Natutical Gardens and Pit, erected near the Beach st. end of the boulevard; a novel and entertaining attraction known as the Dragon Pit, erected by John McGinnis, Revere Beach's veteran showman; the Palace of Wonders, a wonderful appearing structure which is attracting considerable attention; and numerous others.

Of course, there are the roller coasters, four in number, the Thunderbolt, Cyclone, Derby Racer and Lightning. There are a total of more than 35 rides and shows, including the merry-go-rounds, Whip, Dodgem, Bug, Aeroplane Swing, Noah's Ark, Chute-the-Chutes, Coal Mine, Caterpillar, Hey-Day, Pretzel, Virginia Reel and Scooter.

One of the leading features of the season is the Motordrome, where Miss Doris Grey thrills thousands nightly by her death defying stunt. In driving a small racing auto at a mile-a-minute speed on a perpendicular wall. One slip of the wheel and she would be crushed to death. But with cool nerves and steady eye, Miss Grey races along the wall of the bowl of the Motordrome defying death.

'Mayflower Trips' in Musical Setting

So popular have the "Mayflower trips" become among Greater Bostonians, that it has been written down among the song hits of the season. The new song is "On the Mayflower with You and I," and thousands are singing and humming it. Its words are snappy and its music haunting, and it has provided the Mayflower Commodores orchestra with a selection which they are being continually requested to play.

The Mayflower, Metropolitan Boat Company, sponsors of the moonlight sail trips out of Boston, has taken the song fad up, and has printed copies which are distributed as souvenirs to patrons. Moreover, the orchestra members sing it as the dancing aboard ship goes on.

The Mayflower sails every weekday evening from Rowe's Wharf, at 8 o'clock, on these trips. For nearly four hours thereafter, each night, dancing is the order of the occasion, this being continuous through the evening. The orchestra is a topnotch band of jazz experts, and dancing under ideal conditions becomes a terpsichorean delight as the handsome steamer sails over the waters, with invigorating sea breezes to add to the enjoyment.

Aboard is served a buffet lunch. The dancing floor has been enlarged for the 1929 season, and extra dining salon booths have been installed. The steamer returns to Rowe's Wharf at 11 p. m., but the dancing and dining continues until midnight.

Pictures–Variety

GLOBE—"Rainbow Man," with Eddie Dowling, and "Trial Marriage," with Norman Kerry and Sally Eilers, for four days; starting Thursday, "Hole in the Wall," with Claudette Colbert and Edward Robinson and "The Shakedown," with Barbara Kent and James Hall.

BOWDOIN—"Love and the Devil," with Milton Sills and Maria Corda; "Where East is East," with Lon Chaney, and "What a Day," with George LeMaire and Louis Simon. Also vaudeville.

JUMBEGA PARK—Roberta's Circus, an animal act, as the free outdoor feature. In the theater, "The Way of All Flesh" for three days; starting Thursday, "Geraldine." Also midway attractions.

Laughs at Fate

LIGHT LUNCH REEL FOOD

"Forty-five minutes for lunch and make it light," was the daily admonition given by Mervyn LeRoy, youthful director, while guiding Alice White and a bevy of sweet young things through the filming and vitaphoning of "Broadway Babies," opening at Keith-Albee today.

Sally Eilers

A heavy meal followed by the human voice two full tones, according to LeRoy and, if not cautioned, a star or bit player is apt to start on a talking sequence a high soprano before lunch and continue in the same scene almost a contralto after enjoying fried oysters in the studio lunch room.

RACE IS TO HIM WHO RIDES

By Harleigh Schultz

TOO often the gag men have throttled a good film thing. They throw the wrench into the machinery, and whang! go the works. When a play which would have been far better off without their council-table efforts, does manage to survive and sustain interest to the end, it is perhaps all the more worthy of special remark. Such is the case with "Thunderbolt," all-talking picture starring George Bancroft, and being screened as the third banner month offering at the Metropolitan. Until the gagsters begin injecting their stuff, the story unfolds finely enough. It is neither lame nor halt; the hamstringers put in their best, or worst, licks later.

• • •

WHEN the tale is rising to the dramatic climax, they keep piling in the humor until there is so much of it toward the finish that even the laugh of the master criminal as he steps forward to his doom has the quality of the poet's sweet bells jangled, out of tune and harsh. But it is a good laugh, just as the drama threads in themselves are vital and true. It is to the great credit of the principals and photography that they keep you gripped to the last "frame." Due to the combination of good acting and good picturization, the photoplay carries on, and goes over.

George Bancroft

• • •

ONE can ignore even the absurdities in the portrayal of prison death house life; but the too officious gag men grate roughly, and they cannot be forgiven. It is a good thing for the play that their gagging doesn't work the death penalty on the dramatic action.

• • •

THE work of Bancroft especially makes this a great crime picture. It is not so much a matter of moment that this is his second talkie, the chief thing is that his work is satisfactory. Here, through no fault of his, it happens to be a giant's task of overcoming handicaps. He succeeds; his masterly characterization holds clear through. It is he that makes the show click.

• • •

• • •

ON stage, there is a splendid offering. Seldom has better dancing been offered than is here seen. The vehicle is "Let's Go," full of snap and color and melody. Among the good ones are Heller & Riley, Al and Gussie Blum, Grace Doro, Joey Ross and the Dave Gould Girls, with some real stepping that is new. The syncopators make merry, jazzidly, and the orchestra, led by Guy Harrison, plays the good Victor Herbert pieces beautifully.

PLAYED BROCKTON

Appearing as a cub reporter in "Big News" is Herbert Clark, who in 1923 and 1924 was favorite among the players at the City Theater, Brockton. He went directly from this engagement to one on Broadway, where he occupied an outstanding place since that time.

ALL SET FOR LIP EVENT

"ALICE, WHERE art thou?" Charles Delaney has asked, and Alice White has answered for herself in "Broadway Babies." (Keith-Albee). Sort of an invitation to the kiss pose. Who's spoony now?

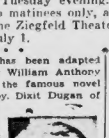
STAGE AND SCREEN

'SHOW GIRL' TO OPEN IN GALA FASHION

FLORENZ ZIEGFELD'S newest musical comedy, "Show Girl," his unique production, will have its world premiere at the Colonial next Tuesday evening. The engagement is for five nights and two matinees only, as the show goes from here immediately to the Ziegfeld Theater in New York, opening there the week of July 1.

• • •

"Show Girl" has been adapted to the stage by William Anthony Maguire, from the famous novel by J. P. McEvoy. Dixie Dugan of the story was a lady who stepped into the atmosphere of the night clubs and started making "Whoopee" with such speed that she annexed several nations, shook the foundations of Wall st., halted the rehearsals for a new Ziegfeld Follies, and convinced all the world that love is the most important thing in a young girl's heart. This captivating character is portrayed by Ruby Keeler (Mrs. Al Jolson), one of the finest tap dancers in the world, lovely and beautiful, singer and comedienne.



Florenz Ziegfeld

• • •

Although Miss Keeler had retired from the stage after her marriage to the millionaire comedian, Mr. Ziegfeld induced her to come back for "Show Girl" because of the fact that the part of Dixie Dugan was so perfectly suited to her varied and engaging talents.

Mr. Maguire's adaptation is a masterpiece of humor and ingenuity. He has even surpassed the brilliant work he has done in his other successful hits, "Rosalie," "Whoopee," "The Three Musketeers," "Six Cylinder Love," "Kid Boots" and "12 Miles Out."

• • •

The music for "Show Girl" is by the distinguished composer, George Gershwin, famous for his "Rhapsody in Blue" and such hits as "Tip Toes," "Lady Be Good," "Oh Kay!" "Funny Face" and "Rosalie." Mr. Gershwin's latest sensational symphonic composition, "An American in Paris," was played here at Symphony Hall twice last week and will be featured in "Show Girl" with an elaborate ballet by Albertina Rasch and appropriate settings and pantomimic embellishments.

• • •

The lyrics for "Show Girl" are the result of the combined talents of Ira Gershwin and Gus Kahn, two of the most famous lyricists in the musical comedy world. Ira Gershwin collaborated with his brother on the lyrics for all his brother's compositions; and Gus Kahn did the lyrics for "Whoopee" in addition to writing practically all the real popular song successes of the past ten years.

• • •

One of the most extraordinary features of "Show Girl" will be the dances by the ingenious Bobby Connolly. A complete series of ballets by Albertina Rasch also will be featured in "Show Girl."

Joseph Urban, America's foremost scenic designer, has created magnificent scenes for "Show Girl." He has contrived marvelous effects with Southern backgrounds, back stage episodes, pent-house interiors, and ballet intervals.

The costumes, a striking feature of every Ziegfeld production, have been designed by John W. Harkrider, the young creative designer who has done the costumes for all the Ziegfeld productions of recent years.

• • •

According to his usual custom, Mr. Ziegfeld has collected for Mr. Maguire's story, not only some of the most successful musical comedy stars living but distinguished stage players also. Surrounding Miss Keeler, are those three captivating comedians, Clayton, Jackson and Durant. The cast includes such gifted actor-players as Joseph Macauley, distinguished baritone, who had the hit song in "The Three Musketeers," Eddie Foy, 3d, son of the late famous comedian, Harriet Hector, extraordinary ballerina, Noel Francis, Barbara Newberry, Caryl Bergman, Frank McHugh, Doris Carson, Kathryn Fairman, Blaine Cordner and Matthew Smith.

• • •

Duke Ellington and his famous Cotton Club Orchestra, makers of popular dance records, will appear on the stage and dispense rare Gershwin melodies. One hundred of Mr. Ziegfeld's most beautiful glorified girls will add glamour and beauty to this stupendous production.

Triangle Sea Trips to Start Next Week

The popular "triangle sea trips" of the Nantasket Beach Steamboat Co. begin next Wednesday for the 1929 summer season. Thereafter the trips will be run every Wednesday, Thursday and Sunday, steamers sailing from Rowes Wharf and returning the same voyage that has been a favorite with Greater Bostonians and transient visitors in the city for years.

The steamer sails at 10:30 from Boston, going first to Salem Willows. The round-trip rate to the Willows, or continue the sail to Nantasket on the same bargain ticket, leaving Salem Willows at 1:45 p. m.

At Nantasket Beach the pleasures of that famous resort are open to the excursionists, and they may either return to Salem Willows on the steamer or come back to Boston on any of the many steamers plying between Rowes Wharf and Nantasket Beach. The excursion steamer sails from Nantasket at 6 p. m. for the return to the Willows and then comes the trip back to Boston.

WHITEMAN INSURED

The life of Paul Whiteman has been insured for a million dollars during the production of his picture, "The King of Jazz." The famous band master is in California now preparing for the production. Paul Fejos will direct. No leading lady has as yet been chosen.

BEAUTY BATS A TRIPLE

Famous Orchestra to Play in Vaudeville

The old Waldorf-Astoria is but a memory and the celebrated landmark is being torn down, but its famous Rose room, Meyer Davis' orchestra, under the direction of Billy Arnet, is to linger on, and play Radio-Keith-Orpheum theaters for some time to come. The original ensemble, which played so long at the Waldorf and on the radio, has been kept intact under the leadership of Mr. Arnet. Today it opens at the New B. F. Keith's Theater for a week's engagement.

Aviatrix Is Daughter of Vaudeville Man

Tom Smith, featured headliner at the Keith-Albee, is the father of the daring young aviatrix, Elinor Smith, who holds the women's endurance record for flying. For several years Mr. Smith has been a staunch flying enthusiast and it was he who purchased the plane in which his daughter remained aloft to establish a record.

It is expected that during his engagement at the Keith-Albee this week Mr. Smith will have the company of his famous daughter, who has earned the soubriquet of "The Flying Flapper."

POPS SOON IN LAST WEEK

Tomorrow night at Symphony Hall Pop concerts will enter upon the last week of their 44th season, although there will be two more nights in the following week, the closing night falling upon July 2.

Special nights of interest next week will be a repetition of the request program on Wednesday and Italian Night on Friday.

An important novelty will be George Gershwin's "An American in Paris," which will have its first Boston performance next Thursday and which will be repeated on Saturday. COPLEY ENDS BIG SEASON

With the fall of the curtain at the Copley tonight, Mr. E. E. Clive will bring to a close what probably has been the most brilliant and successful repertory season ever checked up in the American theater. Mr. Clive will not personally attend the final rites, as he is already in London conducting a systematic quest of new wares for the approaching season, which, we are informed, is to step off in the usual orderly manner of the Copley some time in August. For the terminating ceremonies tonight, Mr. E. E. Underhill is assigned as presiding officer and principal mourner. It is he who will see that the curtain is safely locked and that no stray actors are left behind when the building is barred and shuttered.

Season Comes for Sea Trips to Plymouth

All aboard for Plymouth! is the call next Friday for the Nantasket Beach Steamboat Co. is opening its annual season of Plymouth excursion trips. These are always a big feature of Boston summer travel, offering a wonderful opportunity to flee the heat of the city and enjoy an unsurpassed sea trip and night-seeing tour of a historic town.

The first steamer trip is made Friday, June 28, and hereafter the excursions will take place daily, except Monday. All sailings are from Rowe's Wharf.

For this year the company has made a great cut in the price. The cost of the excursion is now only $1. The steamer leaves the pier at 10 a. m., and there will be a stop-over for two and a half hours at Plymouth to permit patrons to see the notable places in that town and locality.

Actor Wins Queer Race for Role by a Nose"

It isn't only race horses who win by a nose." Bertram Marlburgh, Hollywood screen player, may truthfully say that he won a part in Dolores Del Rio's "Evangeline" because his proboscis matched exactly that of Sir William Pitt of the old English House of Commons. Edwin Carewe interviewed more than a score of screen players with a view of their long, aquiline noses before choosing Marlburgh as the most accurate counterpart of Sir William.

Musical Comedy Star Signed by Warners

Walter Woolf, light opera star, who recently finished a long season in "The Red Robe," has been signed by Warner Bros. for their 1929-30 program, Mr. Woolf is at Hollywood to begin work on the picture.

"Golden Dawn," the immensely successful operetta produced last season by Arthur Hammerstein, has been selected as the vehicle in which the singer will make his Vitaphone debut.

50 IN PERIL AS EAST BOSTON CARS CRASH

The lives of 50 passengers were endangered today when the front of an outbound Gladstone st. trolley car left the rails at Bennington and Walley sts., Orient Heights, E. Boston, and crashed into the side of an Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway car, inbound on the other track.

No one is believed to have been seriously injured although many were severely shaken and bruised as the Elevated trailer bumped 270 feet along the roadbed and then swiped the Eastern Massachusetts car.

Both cars were wrecked and traffic on both rails was delayed 27 minutes, according to the Elevated report.

The Gladstone st. Elevated car and trailer carried all passengers involved, as the Eastern Massachusetts car was empty, except for the motorman. In the Elevated car of the tow-car train were 30 passengers and 02 rode in the trailer which left the rails.

The accident is believed to have resulted from the splitting of a switch by the front trucks of the trailer.

DESERT POET TORN TO PIECES FOR HERESY

Samarkand, Turkestan, June 22 (Ins)—Ibakim Zade, beloved "desert poet," who several years ago renounced Mohammed and became an Atheist, paid for his "heresy" with his life. Hakim fell victim to one of the most ghastly ritual murders recorded in Turkestan in more than a decade.

Hakim volunteered to spread anti-Moslem teachings in the stronghold of the Moslem faith at Shachimardan, Turkestan, where he worked among the people for several months. He read his atheist poems to crowds in the market place.

Recently, a mob, alleged to have been led by a dozen priests, gained the pleading poet on the stone platform in the market place. They tied his arms and legs to the pulses of four oxen and then whipped up the animals so that his body literally was torn limb from limb. The crowd, cowed by the chanting of the priests failed to protest.

Soviet authorities arrested nearly 100 participants in the crime. The prosecutor has demanded the death penalty for 54 of them, mostly priests and sheiks.

New 150 Million Bank Merger Is Planned

New York, June 22 (INS)—Yet another gigantic bank merger was scheduled for the near future between the Chatham Phenix National Bank and Trust Company with the Bank of America, according to reports throughout Wall Street. The combined group would have assets of approximately $450,000,000, with aggregate deposits of $600,000,000.

Explorer Finds New Island

London, June 22 (INS)—Signor Albertini, prominent Italian explorer and scientist, has wirelessed the King o Norway that he discovered a new island near the North Pole while landing an expedition searching for traces of missing members of the crew of the ill-fated dirigible Italia, according to a Central News dispatch received from Rome today.

MANY JOBS FOR UNEMPLOYED OFFERED

Several jobs are offered to the unemployed today by various concerns through the Employment Editor of the Boston Evening American.

Seven young men are wanted by Davis Hardware Stores, Inc., 124 Summer st. Boston, including six in hardware salesmen at salaries of from $25 to $35 a week, according to ability, and one as a receiving clerk. Apply in person to Louis Wax at the above address.

Ten college boys and a ten-cent girls are wanted by L. J. Rubenstein of Royal Appliance Corp., 27 School st., Boston, to do canvassing.

Two students enrolled in every New England college are wanted by the Washington Jewelry Co., 585 Washington st., Boston, to sell jewelry. Apply in person to H. Paul Siegel, at the above address, daily, except Saturday, between 9 and 10 a. m.

C. W. Brotherton of the Western Electric Co., who has just completed a visit to Boston in search of draftsmen and engineers who have recently attended technical schools, is much impressed by the Boston Evening American's plan to aid employers and employes by putting them in touch with each other.

He invites young men who have attended technical schools, whether graduates or not, to write him at 100 Central ave., Kearny, N. J., in connection with possible openings with the Western Electric Co. Employers requiring workers are invited to make their wants known by communicating with "Employment Editor, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston, Mass." No charge will be made to any one for this service.

Queen Mary May Read King's Speech in Parliament

London, June 22 (INS)—It is reported that Queen Mary may read the king's speech from the throne at the opening of Parliament on July 2.

Should this occur it would be the first time in history that the queen has read a speech from the throne while her king was still alive.

The king's plans to attend the state opening of the new Parliament had to be abandoned owing to his recent relapse.

FLAG WINNERS START TOUR OF WORLD

Chicago, June 22—Chicago today will have a chance to see four youthful envoys of friendship, who are to carry the story of Old Glory around the world.

The four national winners of the first annual flag contest of the United States Flag Association will visit here en route to San Francisco where they will begin their world tour.

This quartet of patriotic pilgrims of Uncle Sam are the winners of the nationwide competition in which 200,000 school children participated.

First to arrive will be Alma Groves—Georgia's national girl flag champion—accompanied by Mrs. Edwin C. Gregory, daughter of United States Senator Overman, who is national chaperone to the two boy and two girl champions on the round-the-world trip. They will arrive on the Pennsylvania this morning. Merle Clark the Michigan champion will arrive on the Michigan Central a little later.

At 1 o'clock in the afternoon the two other champions—Mary McGonigal of Troy, N. Y., and Robert J. Sullivan of Syracuse, N. Y., will arrive on the Wolverine in the company of Floyd Williamson, a Hearst representative who will accompany the party on their three months' journey.

The entire flag party will stop at the Stevens Hotel for the day before leaving for San Francisco.

FOOD PRODUCTS LEADERS ON OUTING

With 100 members in attendance, the Association of Manufacturers Representatives of New England made a big day of their annual outing, held at Pelham Inn, Pelham, N. H. Busy food products merchants and salesmen left business cares behind for a day of fun.

The outing committee, headed by William Siegel, presented an attractive program featured by numerous athletic events, musical and comic. The cavalcade of automobiles, bearing the members of the association and their friends to the outing, arrived before noon. An afternoon of athletic events was followed by a dinner which amply appeased the most ravenous appetite.

The feature of the afternoon was the baseball game between the "Nielsens" and the "Kelleys." The "Kelleys," headed by Stanley Kelley, all round athlete of the day, won by a score of 5 to 3. George Nielson captained the "Nielsens."

The results in the other athletic events and games were as follows:

Horse-shoe throwing contest—Final teams: Stanley Kelley and E. E. Arnold; Harry Young and William Siegel.

The outing committee consisted of: William Siegel, chairman; Benjamin F. Kellner, L. P. Simpson, C. W. Reed, H. F. Woodward, H. G. Gifford, George J. Moulton, W. E. McGaffey, R. J. McCormick, William B. Macauley and Derby Lawrence.

Harry Young, president of the association, was given the chair of honor at the "big supper." After the "eats" talented members of the association furnished music and entertainment.

Oil Burner Is Foe to Ash Drudgery

The automatic oil burner business has grown more in volume during the first 10 years of its existence than did the automobile business during a corresponding period, it was announced today by the Boston Oil Burner Associates, local branch of the National Oil Heating Institute.

Drudgery is making its last stand in the American home in the cellar, the associates pointed out. It was kicked downstairs by the vacuum cleaner, crowded from the kitchen by the electric dish-washer and refrigerator, and banished from the laundry by the washing machine and its electrical allies. Now its the basement it is making its last stand against the oil burner.

King Honors Town Where He Rested

Bognor, Eng., June 22 (AP)—This seaside town in Sussex has just obtained from the King permission to change its name to Bognor Regis, as a perpetual commemoration of His Majesty's long stay at Craigwell House, just outside the town, while recovering from his illness of last winter. Several other towns throughout the kingdom also bear the affix indicative of some special connection with royalty at some time in their history.

"HOLLYWOOD REVUE" BIG SUCCESS

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

(Copyright, 1929, by Universal Service)

LOS ANGELES, June 21—Let the George Whites have their "Scandals" and the Florenz Ziegfelds their "Follies"—Harry Rapf has his "Hollywood Revue" and its destined to be annual film entertainment. You would pretty well know that after seeing the 1929 edition.

And Harry Rapf, in addition to snappy song and dance numbers, has his pick of the most famous personalities on the screen. There isn't one of the M. G. M. stars who isn't glad to contribute a bit to the success of this film innovation.

Any star who did refuse Rapf's request to sing or dance would be the personification of ingratitude, for Rapf in his "1929 Revue" has demonstrated that the celebrities of the cinema can do more than look well. He has proved that they need not fear any competition from the stage folks.

"The Hollywood Revues" are to be a yearly institution and, I have no doubt, will be as much as of a boon to the tired business man in search of relaxation as the Broadway musical shows have been heretofore. The 1930 edition will have M. G. M.'s best known stars.

• • •

COUNT any day utterly ruined when some celebrity doesn't ally himself with motherhood. The latest big time name is Charles Wakefield Cadman, who has been signed by Fox to write music for John McCormack's Irish picture.

When Winfield Sheehan gets an idea there is no stopping him. If McCormack needed the Prince of Wales to add a little human interest to his first talkie I can see Winnie making a brave attempt to get the future King of England on a Fox contract.

Speaking seriously and giving Cadman his due credit, he is one of the foremost composers today and it's a fine thing for the movies to have such a man associated with their productions.

• • •

THAT gift to vaudeville patrons Winnie Lightner, who made her screen debut in "The Gold Diggers of Broadway," is saying right on at Warner Brothers studio. That is what usually happens when actor and actress make good in the movies—they get a second invitation.

Miss Lightner's next featured role will be in "She Couldn't Say No," with Lloyd Becon directing. The village will be none other than Arthur Caesar and the village dignitary, Joe Jackson, are combining their several talents to adapt the stage play by Ben Kaye. I suppose Arthur Caesar furnishes the comedy and Joe Jackson the pathos. Caesar when he gets too facetitious.

JAMES HALL prefers red heads.

Norma Kennedy has red hair and she and Hall are one of the most engaged couples at this writing in Hollywood. They are seen everywhere together. It is just one of those sudden romances for they have been "keeping company" for but a week. If you would believe my colloquialism. The next red head in Hall's life is Clara Bow. He plays opposite her in "Dangerous Night Kid" with Richard Wallace directing.

• • •

THE real estate agents are holding thanksgivings every day and all in honor of the increasing Hollywood population. Yesterday Tom Patricola, dancing comedian of Broadway, arrived in town. Word of his expected arrival had been heralded around Hollywood, but no one seemed certain just what studio had first claim to his services.

The mystery is out. Patricola will be starred in "Hard Gurdy," a Fox talkie number, to be directed by Irving Cummings.

And who do you think was on the same train? Dorothy Stone, the lovely daughter of Fred Stone, and herself one of our best known musical comedy stars. Just what Dorothy will do no one seems to know.

• • •

THE movies are becoming more and stabilized, there is no doubt about it, and every day you hear of big names that join up with the mighty industry to the exclusion of other professions. William Slavings McNutt, well known fiction writer, has decided to give up the fiction field to write movies for Paramount. His first is "The Mighty," which will star George Bancroft with Esther Lawton emoting as leading woman. John Cromwell, who was one of the first stage directors to come to our town, will direct.

Speaking of stage directors reminds me that the number of stage people out here looking for jobs is surprising. They all come out on the chance there may be something for them. The gold strike at the Klondyke has nothing on the invasion of Hollywood at this time.

• • •

CHURCHILL DOWNS, the scene of the big Louisville Derby, is the locale for "The Meal Ticket," a story by Frederick Hazlitt Brennan, destined for the talkies, of course. "The Meal Ticket" is all about horse racing, and Fox, being just now very much on the Derby scenes would be, sent a cameraman down there to get thoroughness. The cast, including Lois Moran and Joe Wagstaff, will travel to the famous Louisville race track to get further scenes.

• • •

By GEORGE W. HAMBLIN

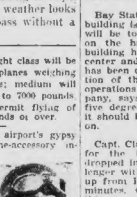
A record of 156 consecutive trips in the past 27 days has been hung up by Colonial Air Transport, Inc., operators of the Boston-New York mail and passenger lines. According to Capt. Richard W. Mackie, divisional superintendent, the weather looks good enough to see the whole month of June pass without a single cancellation.

"This record is arrived at by taking into consideration the mail plane leaving at 7:15 p. m., and the two passenger trips per day, morning and evening. Then add the three planes into Boston every day from New York.

"We have things clicking like clock-work," said Capt. Mackie "and the weather map shows us an area of high pressure moving in, which might last until the first of the month. At any rate, we never have operated in the past with such a perfect record. The influence of the 27 days of continuous flying is being felt on both passenger and mail routes."

Capt. Mackie announces that several changes are pending in the passenger plane personnel. Paul Reeder, formerly one of the first pilots, has been shifted to the Colonial Air Transport mail route between Chicago and Dallas. No definite route has been assigned to Reeder, but it is certain that he will make as much of a success of flying the mail as he has flying the tri-motored Fords. Jesse I. Menefee will replace Reeder as first pilot on one of the ships, and Elling H. Beblen has been appointed a co-pilot. Beblen was formerly with Universal Airlines, flying tri-motors, so he will be right at home on Colonial's passenger service. W. S. Grey will be appointed to co-pilot replacing Harold Crowley, Grey was in the same squadron overseas as Sumner Sewell, general traffic manager of all Colonial airways.

An announcement of great importance to the transport pilots of New England was made today by G. D. Reen, Department of Commerce aircraft inspector. Reen stated that all transport pilots' licenses expiring after September 1 will be renewed after a survey of the type of plane the holder has been flying, and then the pilot will be classed in the light, medium or heavy groups. The pilots who will be placed in the light class will be allowed to fly airplanes weighing up to 3500 pounds; medium will take in from 3500 to 7000 pounds and heavy will permit flying of planes of 7000 pounds or over.



Tom Croce

Tom Croce, the airport's gypsy pilot, and airplane-accessory inventor, has sold four more of his airplane safety control sticks, two to Dennison Airport, and two to Old Colony Airways, at Muller Field, Revere. Dennison placed an order for four sticks but Tom says the production on the safety devices is unable to fill the demands, so only two will be sent to Dennison at the start.

The Croce safety control stick is a breakable stick, which permits the pilot to take control of the airplane when the student "freezes" on the stick, and thus enables the instructor to land the plane without difficulty. The stick is broken by the pilot when he pulls a cord in his cockpit. The stick breaks off just above the socket on the floor, and leaves the frightened student with only the top of the stick in his hand.

Wetmore-Savage Aircraft Corp., of which Bob Wetmore is president, received a shipment of four Arrow Sports, for which the company is New England distributor.

Frankyn Collier, Otto Grow, you know, went down to New York aboard Colonial's tri-motor, and on the trip back, Pilot Whitsett took the ship off its course long enough to fly up and down the Thames and watch the preparations for the Harvard-Yale boat race.

Bay State Flying Service's office building is jacked up on skids and will be towed to its new location on the hangar line today. The building has a marked sag in the center and not a little amusement has been caused by the tipsy position of the office. Fred Pereira, operations manager of the company, says that the building may five degrees of dihedral, an that it should be very stable from now on.

Capt. Clarence Hodge, chief pilot for the Hyannis Airport, dropped in in the company's cabin longer with a passenger. The flight from Hyannis was made in 45 minutes. Capt. Hodge reports that things are going smoothly down on the Cape, and a lot of business is expected by Bob Ayling, operations manager.

Curtiss Flying Service took a party of nine Harvard boys down to the Cape race in one of the company's tri-motored Fords. Lowell R. Bayles was at the controls immediately after the party again boarded the plane and flew back to Boston, landing at the airport just at dusk.

Frank LeMan, sales manager for East Coast Aircraft Sales Corp., is getting a big kick out of flying the company's service plane, a Wright J-4 engined Travel Air. Frank flew to Muller Field, where East Coast has its shop at present, and directly the plane across the field from a couple of thousand feet, with the wind. When he landed the boys told him they thought it was a pursuit plane. The ship won the San Francisco to Los Angeles air race last October, averaging 151 miles an hour for the distance, with the whirlwind turning 2200 revolutions per minute.

Lindy's Bust Boosts Trade in Paris Bar

Paris, June 22 (INS)—The spirit of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh hovers over a popular American ba in Pais, since a life-sized bust of the famous aiman was recently unveiled in the premises.

Cast in bronze, this work of art by A. Johnson, American sculptor, is enthroned directly above the cash register. It is flanked by an American flag of shining bottles.

"That Lindbergh bust helps trade along considerable," said the jovial bartender. "Lindbergh doesn't drink, but a lot of people don't fly either! That's no reason why they can't admire each other just the same, and the boys sure do like Lindy."

Meanwhile every other sentence of the customers is:

"Well, boys, let's drink one to Lindy."

558 Taken in Raid on Gambling House

Chicago, June 22 (INS)—In a raid upon an alleged gambling house today in Cicero 558 men, the largest number ever seized here in one place, were in cells to be examined at the bureau of identification.

17 Families Homeless in a Tarrytown Fire

Tarrytown, N. Y., June 22 (AP)—Seventeen families were made homeless and nine business concerns were wiped out in a fire which swept through Depot sq., in the lower town business section early today. Loss was estimated at $250,000. Five firemen were overcome while fighting the blaze.

FIRST BREAK IN HAVERHIL SHOE STRIKE

Haverhill, June 22—The first break in the ranks of the shoe manufacturers in opposition to demands of 4000 striking employes came today when the Knights & Allen Shoe Company signed an agreement granting a 10 per cent. raise to their workers and a five-day week throughout the year.

The agreement is for a priod of one year. The Knights & Allen factory on Essex st. is one of 19 plants where the shoeworkers are on strike.

There are 200 men involved. They have been on strike a month and will go back to work on Monday.

The union hopes this will lead other manufacturers to sign separate agreements apart from the Shoe Manufacturers' Association.

First List of Winners of Lindy Hats

The first list of names of 100 children of the Boston American Lindbergh Club who are to receive the new Lindy aviation cloth hats is published below. It is the plan of the club to continue publishing lists of names of boys and girls daily until the supply of hats is exhausted.

Be sure to look through the list today. If your name is there just write the secretary of the Boston American Lindbergh Club, P. O. Box 185, Boston, Mass., and send your full name and address. Your hat will be mailed to you FREE as soon as your letter is received.

Remember, be sure to send in your letter within one week from the date of publication of your name in the Boston Evening American.

This Lindy aviation hat is absolutely new. It was designed and made especially for the Lindbergh Club boys and girls.

Now, if YOUR name is not in the list below, watch for Monday's Boston Evening American, when another list of 50 names will be published. Beginning Monday, a list of 50 names will be published daily until the supply of hats is distributed.

The names of boys and girls living all over New England will be included in the lists. Watch for Yours.

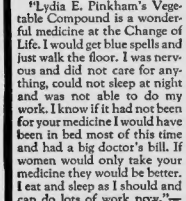
Middle Age Can Be Happy

NO woman need fear middle age if her health is good. Hundreds of active, contented middle-aged women tell their friends that they owe their health and vigor to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.



MRS. ANNA WEAVER
R. F. D. No. 2, Rose Hill, Iowa

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a wonderful medicine at the Change of Life. I would get blue spells and just walk the floor. I was nervous and did not care for anything, could not sleep at night and was not able to do my work. I know if it had not been for your medicine I would have been in bed most of this time and had a big doctor's bill. If women would only take your medicine they would be better. I eat and sleep as I should and can do lots of work now."—Mrs. Anna Weaver.

MRS. MINNIE SHERIDAN
Warrensburg, Missouri

"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at this time (Change of Life), also Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanctive Wash, which I think is wonderful, and the Pills for Constipation. I recommend this full treatment whenever I can and I am perfectly willing to tell anyone what I know about it. I am in better health than I ever was and I am often told that I look more like a sister to my daughter than her mother. I am a hotel cook and have been at one place for six years."—Mrs. Minnie Sheridan.

MRS. MERTON SECOR
Afton, N. Y.

"I am taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at the Change of Life and it certainly has done wonders for me. I highly recommend it to women who are having troubles like mine. It has helped my nerves and my appetite and I sleep well. I feel much better and am gaining in flesh. I am able to do my housework for my husband and little boy and am always busy sewing on my clothing. I am willing to tell other women what the medicine has done for me if they care to write to me."—Mrs. Merton Secor.

Nancy Decides to Break With Mat; Joins House Party.

What Has Gone Before

Nancy Hollenbeck, young and beautiful, wants to keep her newest beau, Mat Tully, all to herself. Mrs. Hollenbeck warns Nancy against her own mistake of marrying a poor man. Nancy after a sleepless night decides to follow her mother's advice. She breaks a date with Mat. Louise and Nancy leave for the annual house party of the rich Craigs.

(Now Go On With the Story)

CHAPTER 2

ALL that night Nancy tossed in bed.

If, like Romeo of old, Mat Tully had come softly back through the garden, and showed a dark head at her window, Nancy's story would have been different. She would have gone with him then, had he asked her, without a packward look for the disapproving family.

But he didn't come, of course. He had said not a word to her of love. "Maybe he doesn't care as much as I do," she thought, threshing about hopelessly. "Maybe it's just as people say, and I'm just in love with love!"

She felt cheated then, and cried a little in the dark. The lumpy mattress sagged under her slight weight, the too-short sheet worked down so that the rough blanket scratched her neck.

Oh for NICE things! A boudoir like May Belle Craig's, with exotic lacquered furniture, and a silken downy quilt.

"Why shouldn't I have them as well as May Belle? Why do we have to be so poor? Why do I have to go and fall in love with somebody who's poor too?" And then, rebelliously, "Well—I won't. I'll get over it. I'll just put him out of my mind. I won't see him again . . . I'll just . . . forget him . . ."

She wept then. Broken-hearted, by. But the tears were for herself, not Mat Tully. After all, she had been spoiled. She was only in love had touched her but lightly . . .

* * * * * * *

"Mat?" Nancy Hollenbeck's voice tilting and lovely, came caressingly over the wire, and all the irritation he had felt at being disturbed at the busiest moment of a busy day disappeared . . . puff! as suddenly flimsy as a soal bubble.

"Yes, this is Mat!" His voice clipped and disinterested a minute ago before he knew who it was, changed miraculously. He moved a little nearer to the phone. "Say, this is grat! How did you know where to call me? This is a pretty big old university, full of laboratories—"

"Oh, I told them I just had to have Matthew Tully, who was working on some dry old chemistry research—"

"You didn't!"

"Yes I did, and I said it was terribly important—"

"Of course it's important. It's always important to hear from you. What time as I going to see you tonight?"

The experiment he had been tending so absorbedly seethed in its frail glass tube, but he had forgotten about it. He remembered only Nancy, Nancy with the hair that was the color of bronze, and smelled like spice. Nancy whose lips were red and promising, whose skin was soft and white.

DEFIES FLY IN BARREL ROLLING

Ash barrel rolling contests having been postponed locally because of wet ashes, Mr. Edward O'Connell, the city's mighty champion, today rolled a baleful eye toward Lawrence, whence emerged a hoarse challenge from a pretender to his throne.

The new aspirant is none other than James Menzie, 32, of 41 Butler st., Lawrence, who is touted as a man of great ability with the ash cans. He has been an employe of the Lawrence sanitation department eight years—going on nine—and he plays football just to keep in trim for barrel rolling contests.

Assistant Superintendent John J. Powers of the Lawrence Health Board has instructed one Daniel J. Costello, clerk of the department, to issue in Menzie's behalf a challenge to the mighty O'Connell. Unlike Mr. Lisse, who started all this controversy, Mr. Menzie is said to be prepared to follow up his claims with an actual demonstration.

All of which, of course, is designed to give Mr. O'Connell the fidgets, but being of a nature hardening few fidgets, Mr. O'Connell merely moistens his hands, dons his canvas gloves and rolls his eye Lawrence-ward, awaiting the comet.

Perhaps it will be arranged for Monday. C. C. Pyle is said to be on his way here.

Italian Consul to Be Guest at Fiesta

Marquis Ferrante, for some years past Italian consul in Boston, but who is leaving tomorrow for his new post at Ottawa, Canada, will today be the guest of honor at the Italian Fiesta on the grounds of the Whiting estate, 31 Washington st., Newton. The Fiesta, which is being given by the children of the North Bennet St. Industrial School, is open to the public, and the proceeds will be used to send mothers and children from the North End to the school's camp at Boxford.

These same children recently took part in a dancing festival at the Newton Center Women's Clubhouse, and so enthusiastically was their dancing received that they have been asked to repeat it out of doors. New dances and Italian novelties planned especially for the Fiesta will be added to the program for the outdoors performance.

3 'BOSTON' CHINESE SEIZED

Three Chinese who claim to have been employed as dishwashers and porters in Boston restaurants are being held by federal authorities in Providence in the belief that they were smuggled into this country illegally.

The trio fell into the clutches of the Westerly, R. I., police and Immigration Inspector John A. Carney of this city, who has charge of the case, believes the men were being smuggled into New York. The men stick to the story that they resided in Boston for a considerable time, but Inspector Carney doubts their claim.

ANTIS RECEIVE CAMBRIDGE WOMAN'S GIFT

Washington, June 22—Three members of the wealthy du Pont family have assumed financial leadership in the anti-prohibition movement with contributions of more than $100,000 in the last 18 months, it was disclosed today in financial statements filed with the clerk of the House.

Pierre, Lammot and Irenee du Pont, all outspoken in their fight against the 18th amendment, have given a total of $100,849.22 to the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment. Similar contributions have been made by other members of the du Pont family.

The newly Delaware industrialists and capitalists have been joined by Edward Harkness, New York financier, and John J. Raskob, chairman of the Democratic national committee, in making regular contributions to the largest anti-prohibition organization.

Other contributors include Mrs. William Emerson, Cambridge, Mass., who gave $2500.

SEEK ARREST OF NON-STOP FLIER

Los Angeles, June 22 (AP)—A request from W. G. Walker, chief of police at Fresno, Cal., for the arrest, on a bad check charge, of Lee Schoenhair, transcontinental nonstop flight record seeker, was received here today a few minutes after the aviator had taken off at 3:41 a. m. for New York.

Schoenhair seeks to break the record of 18 hours 21 minutes and 59 seconds, set by Capt. Frank Hawks.

A telegram from Chief Walker to the police here said Schoenhair had been sought for 30 days. Informed that Schoenhair was on his way to New York, the police said they would forward the message to authorities there.

Frank E. Titus, general sales manager for the Pacific Goodrich Company, sponsoring the flight, said fictitious check charges against the flier "must have resulted from mistaken identity."

Guards Foil Payroll Holdup in Buffalo

Buffalo, N. Y., June 22 (INS)—Firing shots into the ground, two guards frustrated an attempted payroll holdup at the Dunlop Tire Company by three armed bandits.

The bandits had seized the guard, keeping the men in line as they filed into the paymaster's office, but fled in a waiting car without firing a shot at the approach of other guards.

Hundreds View the Body of Gen. Booth

London, June 22 (INS)—The body of Gen. Bramwell Booth, former commander-in-chief of the Salvation Army, lay in state today in the Salvation Army Congress Hall at Clapton, while hundreds filed past the bier in silent tribute. Tonight the body will be removed to Albert Hall, where the funeral service will be held tomorrow evening.

STARTING CRUISE RIGHT

This isn't recruiting propaganda for the Naval Reserve Officers' Training Corps, merely Miss Louise Perry of Belmont bidding goodbye to F. J. Whitley of Georgia Tech as he sailed today with 179 other Georgia Tech and Yale students on the U. S. S. New York on a 20-day cruise. Also leaving the Navy Yard was the U. S. S. Wyoming with 70 Harvard and 88 Northwestern students. (Staff photo.)

TWO NAMED ON CHILD BOARD

Governor Allen today named the Rev. George P. O'Conor of Fedham and Theodore A. Lothrop of Brookline as members of the special unpaid commission to investigate the laws relating to dependent, delinquent and neglected children and other children requiring special care.

In addition to the two named by the governor the commission consists of the commissioner of public welfare, the commissioner of mental diseases and the deputy probation commissioner.

The investigation is based on an inaugural recommendation of the governor's that the laws relating to dependent children be studied and revised.

MILK SURVEYED IN BERKSHIRES

Milk intended for pasteurization is cleaner than milk intended to be consumed new, a survey of conditions in the Berkshires revealed, Health Commissioner George H. Bigelow revealed today.

The reason given is that greater care is exercised by pasteurizing dairymen in the buying of the product.

The survey was made to re-establish confidence in the milk supply of that region following the septic sore throat epidemic of last summer. Conferences were had with local boards of health, milk producers and dealers, and inspections of dairies and chemical and bacteriological analyses were made. some 2200 samples of milk being taken.

Baby Hurt by Torpedo Finds Kin in Hospital

Three-year-old Mary Keenan of 569 Cambridge st., Cambridge, was taken to the Municipal Hospital in that city today suffering from injuries to an eye suffered when a boy playmate threw a torpedo at her.

In the next cot in the hospital she discovered her cousin, John Ritchie, two years, of 140 Gore st., who fell from a second story window, sustaining a double fracture of the skull.

STUDYING NARCOTIC MENACE

Washington, June 22 (INS)—Slowly ploughing the ground in its search for the causes and cure of crime in America, the President's national commission on law enforcement has taken a recess until July 22. Later it is expected experts will visit Boston and other large cities.

During the interval members of the commission will work independently and several researches and inquiries into various phases of law disobedience and abuses will be prosecuted.

By this program, the commission hopes to be able when it returns a month hence to formulate a definite agenda for its investigation.

SURVEY NARCOTIC MENACE.

Before leaving for New York for the week-end, George W. Wickersham, chairman, announced that a comprehensive survey of the narcotic menace will be one of the most important subject on the commission's program. He regards this evil as constituting a grave problem which must be attacked with the most stringent measures.

The commission plans to enlist the support of experts all over the country in evolving recommendations for remedial action to smash the drug traffic. A sub-committee will be appointed and charged with the specific duty of investigating the narcotic problem. Wickersham plans to name this group as one of the first acts after the recess.

EXPERTS ARE NEEDED.

"We shall name some experts to help us," said Wickersham. "We are particularly anxious to have some one who is expert on the subject of narcotics. We realize that this is one of the most important factors in crime.

"We do not wish to approach it with our limited knowledge, so we have sent out several requests to officials to submit the names of persons who may be qualified for the post. Just as soon as we can do so we will employ the man who seems best fitted to carry on this important work."

Eastern Cars to Be Rerouted Sunday

A temporary rerouting of all trolley cars of the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway operating near the North Station, between Scollay sq. and the lines running to Chelsea, Revere and Lynn, has been made necessary by the extensive track changes being made in the vicinity of the North Station by the Boston Elevated. The change will be in effect from 9 o'clock tonight to early Monday morning.

Those cars which usually operate from the Scollay and Haymarket subway to Chelsea Revere and Lynn, will run on the surface during the temporary rerouting.

Dump 300 Gallons of Liquor Into Sewer

Some 300 gallons of wine and moonshine, seized by the Cambridge police in raids, was emptied into the sewer on Green st., outside Cambridge police headquarters, today. Capt. John J. Canney supervised the work while a representative of the department of public safety and a sorrowful crowd looked on.

Mayor McGrath on Road to Recovery

The name of Mayor Thomas J. McGrath was taken off the danger list today at Quincy City Hospital and it was announced his condition was favorable and that he would probably leave the hospital in about a week. The mayor was operated on for stomach trouble three weeks ago and for a time his life was despaired of.

300 Harvard '99ers Are Delayed by Fog

The Governor Dingley, with 300 members of the Harvard class of 1899 aboard, was reported held up by fog at the Wing's Neck entrance to Cape Cod Canal today, on the way back to Boston from New London. The steamer was chartered by the class to make the trip to the boat races and return, but the fog was so dense the craft was anchored and obliged to remain several hours.

Present Aida

JULIA PETERS IN BOSTON FOR AIDA

Julia Peters, brilliant young American prima donna who will sing the principal role in the outdoor presentation of Verdi's opera, "Aida," next Thursday evening at Braves Field, has arrived in Boston and with other members of the cast is making ready for the open air spectacle.

Invitations to attend the opera, which is the first to be given outdoors in Boston in more than a decade, were extended to Governor Allen and Mayor Nichols by Maurice Frank, the producer, who has made a success of open air opera in New York.

Besides Miss Peters, the cast will include Fernando Bertini, tenor; Elizabeth Hoeppel, contralto; Miguel Santacana, basso; Gabriello Simeoni, conductor, and Ciro de Rita, baritone.

The management, in addition to distributing thousands of free tickets to the children of Greater Boston through the Boston Evening American, will have as guests 500 boys and girls from local orphan asylums and several hundred other unfortunates.

A throng of 20,000 is expected to witness the presentation of the popular opera which will be a notable event in the history of music in Boston. Requests for allotment of seats have been received from all over New England.

Miss Peters is a singer who has had a remarkably rapid rise in the world of opera. In little more than a year her silvery voice has raised her from comparative obscurity and she is now acclaimed by critics as one of America's greatest.

She was born and educated in New York and received her entire musical education in that country. Her singing is enhanced by a fine clean and magnetic personality. In a recent tour she captivated audiences everywhere and last May her soprano voice was broadcast throughout the world by radio.

MRS. ANOLANT SPEAKS OUT. Bride of the Yellow Bird Flier has a word or two to say about the young man who made the trip across with the Frenchman. In the language of the statesman himself, "And How!" In tomorrow's Boston Sunday Advertiser.

FOIL GIRL'S WEDDING IN SECRET

Marriage intentions filed in Providence revealed today the plans of Miss Doris Eleanor Newman of Winter st., Norwood, and Hawkesworth Douglas Watson of Lewis ave., Walpole, to culminate a romance with a quiet wedding.

Relatives and friends of the young couple knew nothing of their plans and Mrs. H. M. Watson, mother of the prospective bridegroom, said the news was a big surprise to her, although she was aware her son and Miss Newman were engaged and would be wed some time.

Watson, who formerly attended Massachusetts Agricultural College and also Amherst College, started on a new job today, according to his mother. He is a prominent member of the American Legion.

Miss Newman, who is a graduate of Norwood high school and is employed as bookkeeper by a coal concern, at first denied all knowledge of the application for a marriage license, but later changed her answers to "Nothing to say."

CO-ED'S SLAYER PLANS FIGHT FOR LIFE

Columbus, O., June 22 (INS)—Dr. James H. Snook today executed an "about face" and now is planning a legal battle to escape the electric chair.

The ousted Ohio State University professor, who confessed he hammered and knifed his 24-year-old co-ed sweetheart, Miss Theora Hix, to death, no longer wants to "have it all over with." He wants to save his skin.

He will plead not guilty when arraigned today, in spite of the fact that he signed a confession admitting he killed the girl whom he had been infatuated with, because she remonstrated with me against leaving the city for the week-end with my wife and baby and threatened to kill both of them if I did."

Snook is now grasping at the straw held out to him by his lawyers that he has a "legitimate defence." He is more than eager to go along with them and fight for his life.

Show Girl Won't Tell Who Her Husband Is

Grace Hayes, show girl and vaudeville artist, has been secretly married for four years, she admitted to newspapermen today, on her arrival to fill an engagement.

Who her husband is and where they were married Grace insists is nobody's business and she announced in no uncertain terms that she would not reveal his identity.

Rumors linked the name of Miss Hayes with that of Charles Foy, son of the late Eddie Foy.

Hoover 'Nose for News' on Job; Tips a Story

Washington, June 22 (AP)—President Hoover's "nose for news" led him to advise the newspaper correspondents at his semi-weekly conference that they might obtain an interesting "story" by inquiring at the Treasury for an estimate as to the amount of outstanding currency which will never be offered for redemption through exchange for the smaller bills soon to be issued.

Pointing out that there is outstanding a total of $5,065,402,493 in currency of various types, Mr. Hoover recalled that after the paper money was last recalled for redemption soon after the Civil War, $10,000,000 of the $50,000,000 then outstanding never was presented for redemption.

"That means the government's assets were increased by just that amount," Mr. Hoover said, adding with a smile that of course he didn't expect the 13 to 50 ratio to obtain at present.

The paper currency now in use will be replaced gradually with the new money, but treasury officials said it probably will be years before all of it has been retired. Until the redemption period ends, perhaps some 15 years hence, no check can be made on how much the government's assets will have been increased because of the decision to issue smaller sized currency.

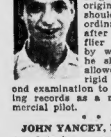
The Curious Quizzer

Everett Folk Answer His Daily Question and Pose for Pictures.

THE QUESTION

Do you think attempts at flying records should be confined to pilots who have commercial licenses or be open to "joy-hoppers?"

JOSEPH BRACCIA, Cazenova pl—Before any pilot is licensed to fly a machine he should be required to make a promise not to tempt record flights in altitude or over long distances. The original license should be issued for ordinary flights, and after the licensed flier had qualified by wide experience he should then be allowed if he passed rigid tests in a second examination to attempt breaking records as a registered commercial pilot.



JOHN YANCEY, Lewis st.—I am proud to be a namesake of Capt. Lewis Yancey of the powerful plane Green Flash, but cannot claim any relationship with him. I am sorry to say. A flier of his ability is entitled to fly commercially or for the thrills he may get out of any kind of flying he takes the notion to attempt. It is to fliers of his type that no obstacle should be put by when he attempts making for speed or distance. Too many lives have been lost by inexperienced fliers who attempt to prove themselves as capably efficient in aerial flights.

MRS. AGNES MAE KELLEY, Broadway—There is no question asked when a person of ordinary intelligence applies for an automobile license as to whether he is going to use the car for "business or for "joy-riding," and there should be no question as to a person's right to fly an airplane, in any way he should choose. If a flier wants to "joy-hop," I can see no reason why anybody should try to stop him. The flier who is capable of flying commercially is no better qualified to fly in long distance record-making attempts than the registered flier who ventures as a joy-rider. I am going to take a trip with my 19-year-old son in an airship next week.

* * *

MRS. MARGARET E. GLEASON, Dunham pl.—No records should be attempted by fliers unless they had long experience as joy-riders, registered commercial pilots. I do not feel it safe for ordinary air pilots to attempt stunt-flying or flights to create new and hazardous distance records. Only the recognized handlers of the machines such as Col Lindbergh, and others who understand the fine art of flying should be allowed to try for records. One of my girl cousins was among the passengers on the first commercial trip to New Jersey from the East Boston airport. My first trip in an airship will be late this summer on a trip to New York.

3 TWI GAMES LISTED TODAY

By DICK McSWEENEY

Twi League fans have their choice of three contests this afternoon since Dorchester visits Quincy, Malden goes to Salem and Reslindale travels to Taunton.

Dorchester goes into the game with Quincy without Shortstop J. Marshall, who is suffering from a severe leg injury. Marshall slid into a base in the fray with Reading on Thursday and was forced to retire. He may be lost to the team for a month. His brother, Billy Marshall, will move over to short from third, with Moran playing second and Davidson covering third.

Dorchester's hold on the league lead is being rapidly overhauled by Quincy and South Boston, two clubs who are hitting a fast pace.

McDonald will be sent after the one by the Dorchester club, and "Punk" must hurl his best to hold the Quincy sluggers in check. The Granite City nine has Mahoney groomed for today's pitching assignment.

Taunton's new outfit entertains Reslindale with the expectation of making a better showing than that displayed in Wednesday's battle with Fred Mellen's club.

Charlie Murphy, pitcher, who did so well with the Boston College nine this season, is to serve them up for Taunton, with Harraghy catching. Frank Milliken, former Lawrence Academy tossed ace, is slated to twirl for the visitors. Frank is a fine hurler and can slug when necessary.

HARVARD CREW OVERWHELMED BY THE ELIS

Gales Ferry, Ct., June 22—A. G. Blagden, Jr., of Greenwich, Ct., has been elected captain of next year's Yale varsity.

Blagden, who rowed No. 7 in the varsity race, is the son of the 1901 Yale crew captain.

Red Top, Ct., June 22—Lawrence Dickey of Mt. Kisco, N. Y., was elected captain of the Harvard varsity crew after the race with Yale. Dickey is a junior and has been a member of the varsity for the past two seasons and rowed on the freshman eight. He rowed number three in the varsity in the big race.

New London, Ct., June 22—Yale rooters flung defiantly their blue banners into the sunset glow when their varsity eight crew showed its rudder to the Harvard shell for the entire four miles of their fifth varsity race and finished five lengths in the van.

For a mile it might have been termed anyones race. Yale was two-thirds of a length in the van as they finished the half-mile and seven-eighths of a length as their shells passed the mile flags.

Then the superior Yale stroke began to tell.

With both rowing at 32 for the third half mile, Yale increased its lead to a trifle over two lengths as they approached the mile and half stake. Ed Leader's crew had tugged its shell into a comfortable safe lead and it was clear that only a real upset, an accident, could dislodge the Yale oarsmen from victory.

YALE EASES DOWN

Coxswain Loomis of the Elis called for the spurt at this point which spelled the decisive downfall of the rapidly waning Harvard hopes.

The race won as calculations go, Yale eased down and the tall, slender Blue sweepswingers tugged the fifth half-mile at a 31 clip. Harvard stuck to its orthodox 32. Yale slipped between the two and the half-mile flags with a lead of almost five lengths. Yale reversed its tactics in leaving the two and added Yale to a lead of seven and a half lengths at the third mile. This seemed decisive enough to satisfy the exhilarating Yale coxswain and he allowed the clip to lapse to a 31, but Yale reached its three-quarter peg at the three-half mile mark when eight full lengths separated the prows. Both eights had a finish fiercely fought over, and both shot their stroke to 34 as they skimmed along the water between the crowded yachts.

CUT DOWN LEAD

Harvard displayed an efficiency of stroke during the final half mile which had been wanting in the earlier distances. Yale raised its stroke to a rapid 36 for the distance, but Harvard, dipping into the surface of the flames two points lower, found its pace of 34 cutting down the Yale lead.

Notes of the Race

In practice the Yale eight rowed upstream in its final time trial last week in 20 minutes, 37 seconds, but conditions the evening when the trial took place were decidedly faster than when the race was rowed.

Gus Blagden, captain of the 1901 crew, had two sons on the squad, Gus, Jr., who rowed number seven, and Joe, who was substitute.

Golfer Pays $10,000 to Break 80 on $5 Bet

Chicago, June 22 (AP)—The pet peeve of Alfred S. Austrian, Chicago attorney, has been his inability to play a round of golf with a dignified score. Day after day his scorecard was in the 90s, and occasionally in three figures.

Austrian went to George A. Nell, professional at the Lake Shore Country Club, and said:

"I will give you $10,000 if you will teach me to break 80."

Nell told him to take off his coat and the training began. It was no overnight miracle: it was months of toil. The attorney seemed to have some vital reason for wishing to attain this golfing ambition.

There came a day when the professional said to his pupil:

"Go out and play; return and pay."

The attorney came back a score of 78. He came back a second time with a 79, and the third time his score was 77.

Austrian was asked why he was willing to pay $10,000 to shoot under 80.

"To win a $5 bet," he said.

The Neponset Wanderers winners of seven baseball games to-date in the season will meet Winthrop Town Team as their opponents on Sunday afternoon on the Garvey Playgrounds, Neponset, the game is to start at 3 o'clock.

Bert Linvall pitching ace of the Neponset nine won six games without suffering defeat, will do the chucking against the Winthrop team, while Whitmarsh will do the catching.

TECH OARSMAN DOWN WITH FEVER

Poughkeepsie, N. Y. June 22 — Coach Bill Haines of the M. I. T. crew was forced to abandon the workout for the varsity when Howard L. Richardson, No. 6 man, was put to bed with a high fever.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 22—With hard work over for the majority of the 22 crews which race here in the annual regatta events on Monday, the omen and their coaches settled down today for the toughest stretch—from now until race time.

Barrett's Columbia trainer, is authority for the statement that there is sure to be a loss of at least three pounds per man before race time, despite the fact that light workouts are in order.

Two of the California varsity eight were stricken by the heat, and three more in the shell now, look drawn and weak.

Massachusetts lost one man, and Penn is minus one of its best oarsmen, Dickson Barnhard. The extreme heat caused each one of these men to fold up.

There is a lot of consolation for Coach Bill Haines of the M. I. T. eight to find out that Joe Wray, who replaced Louis Evans at No. 2, did a splendid job in a three mile time trial.

Somerville Cubs to Go After 20th Win

THE Somerville Cubs will go after their twentieth victory of the season on Sunday afternoon, when they inaugurate Sabbath baseball at Lincoln Park, Somerville, opposing the strong Dorchester A. A.

The Cubs have about the strongest semi-pro nine in this district and only on last Thursday evening, they held the Boston Braves to a 7-6 score, playing in impressive fashion throughout the entire game.

Manager Bill Flynn of the Cubs plans to send either Henry Nelson or Joe McGonagle to the mound to stop the Dorchester attack. F. Donovan will catch One of the reasons for the Cubs' success this year, has been the remarkable all-around playing of Al McAuliffe, star third baseman, who socked a home run against the Braves with two men on base.

Krauss and Kodad is the likely Dorchester battery.

Robertson Seeks Game Higher Up

Homer Robertson, fighting his first bout as a light heavyweight, last Monday night out 1 an impressive victory over Jimmy Mendes, the hard hitting New Bedford light heavyweight. Solly Snyder, manager of Homer, is now willing to send the local colored punches against Tuffy Griffiths, Leo Lomski or Champion Tommy Loughran.

Five Riders Battle in Big Paced Race

EITHER George Chapman, the grand old man of cycling, or E. Frankie Keenan, the Revere youngster, is expected to lead the way in the 25-mile motor-paced race at the Revere Cycle Track tonight. Bike fans are in a quandary as to which to chose.

Opposed to Keenan and Chappie will be Francesco Zucchetti, the Italian who is making a strong bid for the American title this year, Charlie Jaeger, the Newark rider, and Victor Rausth, the young German who recently arrived in this country.

The feud between Keenan and Chapman has gone along merrily this year. On the Revere track, they have met twice and each has come out with a victory. In the matter of races won here, however, Chappie is in the lead, for he has captured two to the lone contest won by Keenan.

Jackie Luyton and Albert Crossley will team up against Frank Dilani and Archie Villa in a tandem race, just before the wind-up. This race will be run in mile heats, best two in three to decide the winner.

Amateurs and pros will also be seen in shorter distance races, and with a break from the weatherman, Nat Butler is making plans to handle one of the largest crowds of the year.

EVENING AMERICAN SPORTS

Gorilla Jones Says He Will Kayo McVey at Wigwam

EAGER FOR WALKER MATCH

GORILLA JONES of Akron, O, who has replaced the late Tiger Flowers as the most popular negro boxer in the ring today, predicts that he will knock out Jack McVey when they meet at Braves Field next Monday night, with the same crushing right hand punch which brought down Al Mello.

Jones is one of the most confident figures in the fistic game today and it will be remembered that he predicted that he would stop Mello prior to their bout and the mere fact that he feels the same way in regard to his meeting with McVey indicates that Hub fans are going to witness another season of hard hitting.

It didn't require the word of Mello to make Jones one of the hardest hitters in the ring today for Hub fans were convinced of this fact after seeing him in action against the Lowell boy.

This time, Jones is invading the middleweight class to meet McVey, who stopped Arthur Flynn in his lone appearance in a Boston ring. Jones may find the middleweights more formidable than the welterweights, which he cleaned up in less than a year, but contenders for the crown have so skillfully sidestepped meeting Jones that the Akron boy is forced to ply his trade among the middleweights now.

Jones has gone so far as to seek a match with Mickey Walker if he is successful against McVey Monday night, and Promoter Tex Rickard Mack is now working on such a feature. Jones is also to win the $1000 belt emblematic of the colored middleweight champion of the world, which will go to the winner of Monday night's bout.

WITH the principals in this title bout already on the ground and finishing their training here, ring critics predict one of the greatest slugging matches of the year when they climb into the ring for there is nothing like seeing two hard hitters striving in earnest for a knockout victory. And such fights always will thrill the fans as long as boxing endures.

Popular Jake Zeramby, the Lynn boy, will be unable to go through with his bout with Sammy Dorfman on account of the injury sustained when Sammy Fuller fouled him but Promoter Mack promises another 10-rounder, which will be on a par with the main bout.

In the preliminaries, it is expected that the fans will witness plenty of hard hitting. Benny Kid Carter, Hub featherweight, meets Jimmy Brisco of Revere.

Those who recently met at Portland, Me., promise to give the fans plenty of action.

In another eight-rounder, Frankie Stevens of Boston will get the chance to turn the tables on Walter Peter of Germany. They recently met at the Garden in a great bout.

MR. BOSTON by JACK CONWAY

"SUEY WELSH, who manages Gorilla Jones, has one of the best stables of boxers in the country," said Mr. Boston today. Besides Jones, Welsh cares for the ring destinies of Kayo Christner and Emmett Rocco.

"Christner blasted his way to fame when he tipped over Knute Hansen. He was later beaten by Jack Sharkey, but he made a creditable showing against the leading heavyweight contender.

"Rocco recently won a decision from Johnny Risko at Cleveland, but in his last start was knocked stiff by Otto Von Porat in Chicago. Von Porat is a crude, awkward boxer, but he is liable to knock out anybody he can click on the chin with one of his wild right hand belts.

"I believe Gorilla will be the next welterweight champion of the world,' said Suey. 'He has boxing class, skill, speed and a knockout sock. My job will be in trying to get Joe Dundee to enter the ring with Jones. I don't believe the champion's china chin would stand up very long under Jones' right hand attack.

"I look for Gorilla to win from Jack McVey at Braves field on Monday night. It will be a tough fight as McVey has got plenty of ability, but Gorilla will wind up out in front.

"I have Christner battling Von Porat in the semi-final on the Milk Fund card on next Thursday night. The king of the Akron tire puts will avenge the knockout of Rocco.'"

MR. BOSTON declared he finds boxing fans once more talking about the New England featherweights.

"Jake Zeramby's victory over Sammy Fuller has put new life into the featherweight group," added the veteran. "Zeramby displayed a world of class up to the time he was fouled. He blocks and slips punches like some of the old timers. He is also able to deliver a stinging wallop.

"Frankie Moore, Hy Diamond, Charley Parker, Freddy O'Connor and Jackie Donahue are other featherweights who are expected to furnish action during the outdoor season.

"ANDY CALLAHAN, Lawrence 138-pounder, is another youngster who is sure to make a name for himself in the ring. He reminds me a great deal of the Mickey Walker of eight years ago. He is always going forward when in the ring and can knock out an opponent with either hand. Johnny Buckley has Callahan signed to battle Johnny Casper at Tiverton, R. I., on next Monday night, while he has him in with Pete Pacheco at Holyoke on next Friday evening.

"The Boston Garden recently was unsuccessful in lining up any of a dozen opponents for Callahan. Kid Kaplan finally consented to tackle Andy, but he had a false idea of his value as an attraction.

"STRANGLER LEWIS displayed good judgment in deciding to allow the public to attend his training bouts at the Revere Cycle Track without charge. The average professional athlete usually insists on the fans paying 50 cents to $1 to attend a training session. The fans then expect fiery action and are disappointed when they don't get it.

"An athlete in training should merely do things that will get him physically fit for the contest at hand and should not be concerned with giving the spectators thrills."

RIVAL MATMEN IN TRAINING

With Sonnenberg and Strangler Lewis on the job, interest has increased in the world's heavyweight championship wrestling bout which will be staged by Paul Bowser at Fenway Park on Tuesday evening, July 9.

Bowser reports that the advance sale has passed the $15,000 mark and that he is confident the gate will hit $150,000.

Both have opened training camps—Lewis at the Revere Cycle Park and Gus at Fernecroft Inn, just a few steps off the Newburyport turnpike. The gates of these establishments are off the hinges. All may see the matmen prepare themselves for the tremendous task ahead. Already, thousands have availed themselves of this privilege. Interest, already tense, will become even greater as the night of July 9 approaches.

Sonnenberg wrestles each afternoon between 3 and 4 o'clock with his partners—Frank Delmanno of the North End, Jack Ganson and Stanley Pinto, while at the cycle park Lewis has Marin Plestina as his chief mate. The training staffs at both camps will be increased next week. Though both have been warned not to go at it too hard thus early, yesterday's wonderful weather tempted both to keep unusually busy. As matmen seldom have to make weight, in fact a certain amount of spare poundage is of value, to keep fit and yet not pull down in avoirdupois is the problem which confronts both gladiators.

Burke Leads in N. Y. Open

Rye, N. Y., June 22 (INS)—Billy Burke, professional of the Westport, N. Y., club, had a four-stroke lead on his nearest rivals, "Light Horse" Harry Cooper of Buffalo and George Christ of Rochester, as play in the New York state open golf championship was resumed this morning. Burke turned in a 72 and 68 for a total of 140 for the first 36 holes? the 68 breaking the course record held by Walter Hagen.

The 36 holes of play today will conclude the tourney.

How Bennie Leonard Beat Freddie Welsh

For many years "Tad," T. A. Dorgan, one of the greatest cartoonists and sporting authorities that ever lived, covered the "fight" game shortly before his death "Tad" wrote and illustrated a series of stories describing in his inimitable style those ring battles which for thrills and sensationalism were stamped indelibly in his mind. These reminiscences deal not only with fights in which titles were at stake, but with thrilling affairs staged in private and at the smaller clubs. This story is one of the stories

By TAD

WITH his right hand still clinging to the upper rope in his opponent's corner, Freddie Welsh, beaten and helpless, tried to lift himself up in the ninth round of his championship fight at the Manhattan Casino on May 28, 1917.

Before the toppled titleholder stood Benny Leonard.

Kid McPartland, the referee, had just pushed Leonard away, automatically making him the champion, the first New York City boy to claim such a distinction in any class.

Welsh was not on the floor, and there had not been a count of any sort over him, yet he was in such a helpless condition that to allow the quarrel to go further would have been more than brutal.

For eight rounds the little Briton had done fairly well. He was outpointed, but he was never really stung. As the bell clanged for the ninth period, Welsh walked up well covered, as he had in previous rounds, and then started to dance about.

Leonard danced sideways with the champion, and as he drew near he let a right go to Freddie's mush. The right landed about two inches below the top of Fred's head. It was a terrific wallop, and as it crashed Welsh tripped and it looked as though he was about to fall.

HE recovered his balance, but Leonard was right on top of him with a volley of rights and lefts. He fought the Briton along the ropes toward his own corner and there was a terrific battle along the line, with Welsh running second all the way.

A roar went up from the crowded house. Leonard let fly another right, but this time it landed flush on the chin and Fred fell to the floor for the second time during his long ring career.

As Welsh fell he grabbed the lower rope and pulled himself up immediately. It was very poor judgment on his part. A novice at the game will take the count to clear his head.

This round had only lasted forty seconds that far. Leonard tore into his man and another right put Fred to the mat once more. He—Lewis at the Revere Cycle Park and Gus at Fernecroft Inn, just a few steps off the Newburyport turnpike. The gates of these establishments are off the hinges. All may see the matmen prepare themselves for the tremendous task ahead. Already, thousands have availed themselves of this privilege. Interest, already tense, will become even greater as the night of July 9 approaches.

fell over on his side, grabbed the lower rope again and was up in a jiffy, but very much bewildered.

Leonard, thinking he might fall without being hit, stepped back to see. Welsh didn't, however. Instead, he looked in blank fashion around the ring.

Then Leonard put all he had into another right and, catching his man on the ear, sent him down on his face to the resin. Once more Welsh rolled over, and before the referee could count had clambered up the ropes again.

The crowd at this stage of the battle was wild.

WELSH had just reached his feet when Leonard sailed in again. He hit Fred on the chin with lefts and rights at the rate of about six or seven a second. Welsh gradually slipped from a standing position and, grabbing the upper rope, had himself while Leonard hit him with the bucket. He sent in right after right while Welsh held himself there almost in a sitting position. Blood poured from his mouth and nose. It was a terrible sight. The crowd yelled "Stop it!" Referee McPartland then did the right thing and pushing Leonard away, lifted the beaten Briton to his feet.

Freddie stood up straight. Then, as McPartland turned to speak to Leonard he fell to the ropes and rebounded clear across the ring. He reeled like a drunken man. His head was about even with his chest as he took a headlong dive through the rope on the opposite side of the ring. Those at the ringside held him up until his seconds lifted him to his chair.

The crowd went wild. Hats were thrown. Cops whanged away with clubs, the ring was full of wild men, everybody telling everybody else something, and no one could hear.

Leonard walked over to Welsh's chair and, thinking no hand, said: "Freddie, it comes to all champions." Welsh looked up in a daze and, thinking probably that he was on his farm, said: "Nellie, bring in the kiddies, here's a friend of mine."

Miller of Medford in Dilboy Show

JOHNNY MILLER of Medford, former Boston College high athlete, considered to be one of the brightest middleweight prospects to enter the competitive amateur boxing ranks in many a day, has entered for the Dilboy Post amateur show being held next Wednesday evening, at Dilboy Field, Somerville.

A stellar list of fighters will compete in this tourney, coming from far and wide and including many local favorites in addition to well-known boxers, from more distant localities.

Competition will be held in six classes: the 160 pounds for novices and the following open divisions: 118, 126, 135, 147 and heavyweights. Entries are being taken care of at the Dilboy Post, V. F. W. headquarters, Knights of Columbus building, Highland ave., Somerville, where reservations may now be made.

Harvard Meets Tigers at Polo

Philadelphia, June 22 (AP)—Semi-finals of the intercollegiate polo championships of the United States at the Philadelphia Country Club today promised thrilling competition.

Harvard and Princeton, the opponents, were well-mounted and appeared evenly matched. Members of both teams are daring riders and splendid mallet wielders.

The winner will meet Yale in the final round next Saturday. In the opening contest last week Yale defeated Pennsylvania Military Academy, while Princeton eliminated the West Point Military Academy, Harvard drew a bye.

COTTON GOODS AND SHOES IN NEW STUDY

By FRANK H. MELOON, Financial Editor

Harvey A. Sweetser, New England D. ... Manager of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, U. S. Department of Commerce, supplies me with a new study of Use of Cotton Goods in the Boot and Shoe Industry just completed by Edgar T. Crosby and Robert Sklar.

Harvey A. Sweetser (Photo by Falco Studio)

Without giving special thanks to these compilations few people would think of there being any special connection between the two industries. The experts point out a long list of present uses of cotton in the shoe trade. They point also to expanding additional uses of cotton in the boot and shoe industry in numerous lines, set forth in the new booklet.

* * *

No reliable estimate as to the quantity of cotton fabrics consumed in the manufacture of boots and shoes could be arrived at, owing to lack of even approximate data on the subject. However, estimates given by some shoe manufacturers and shoe findings merchants range from a minimum of 50,000,000 to a maximum of 75,000,000 yards for the annual consumption, which would require, roughly, from 35,000 to 50,000 bales of raw cotton. Drills and twills are by far the most important fabrics from the standpoint of quantity, probably accounting for more than half of the total cloth consumed. Ducks are also consumed in considerable quantities but the other fabrics do not represent a great deal of yardage.

* * *

The cotton fabrics used in the making of boots and shoes may be grouped into three general classes: those used for the outside of uppers, those used for linings and those used for trimmings, reinforcement etc. other miscellaneous purposes. The first group consists largely of sateen, velveteen, plush, duck, heavier cloth cotton-backed rubber and cotton-backed velvet. Elastic fabrics are used in such shoes as congress gaiters. In the second group consisting of fabrics used for linings drills and twills are the most important fabrics although Canton flannel, crepe and other cloths are used to some extent. The third group consists of a number of different fabrics used for various purposes. Narrow tapes are used for trimming edges and reinforcing seams and ornaments. Drills and other cloths are used as reinforcing materials for eyelets, buttonholes and seams. Drillings are used for backing thin upper leathers, while duck and drill are used for backing fabrics used for uppers. Duck and osnaburg are at times used to reinforce insoles. Cotton felt is employed for insoles and heel pads.

* * *

The greatest confusion evidently exists on the public mind concerning the difference between speculation and investment. The supposed mentality of all the members of Congress as lately quoted in Washington failed to bring out a definition easily accepted definition. This is not surprising, since financial authorities themselves disagree.

* * *

The publicity attending the stock market invasion of Bishop James Cannon, Jr., furnishes facts which contain no hint of scandal connected with stock dealings. The Bishop is quoted as saying he thought he was buying stocks for investment on the partial payment plan and that he did not intend to gamble.

* * *

This view of the transactions shows that there is at least one church leader who does not view with the seeming view of the Federal Reserve Board that those who help to swell the total of broker's loans are all gamblers. This apparent conception of the Federal Reserve Board has earned that body very widespread denunciation.

Mr. Ford stated that domestic production was steadily on the increase, and that the daily output in August would be well in excess of 7000 cars a day at this time. "When I left," he said, "production was still running many thousand cars behind orders on hand, and I have not heard that this situation has changed. That the Boston Stock Exchange has been successful in its efforts to develop the local market is borne out in evidence the past week. In the place of copper shares, which generally are the backbone of trading, the utility shares came to the front. Demand for this group, of course, was stimulated by the run in the utility share market on the New York Stock and Curb Exchanges.

	Cur	1929
	High	Low	Adv.
East Dist Inv	22½	15	8½
Edison Elec Ill	270	253½	16½

Engr Pub Ser	47¾	35	12¾
Ind Hydro El	47¾	43	4¾
Ind Superpr	83	51	32

While the gains in local issues are quite moderate in comparison with advances on the big boards, the trend nevertheless, has been steadily upward and has been accompanied by a good volume of trading. Furthermore several of the above issues have only been listed a comparatively short time.

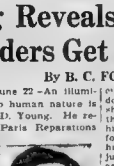
Young Reveals a Secret, Leaders Get Biggest Jobs

By B. C. FORBES

NEW York, June 22 —An illuminating glimpse into human nature is given by Owen D. Young. He reveals that the Paris Reparations Conference might still be dragging along if his son had not been good enough to be married last week, and if an honorary college degree had not been awaiting Mr. Young this week.



B. C. Forbes

The staid dignitaries of seven nations, who could not be induced to move briskly by even the most ponderous reason of state, hustled furiously to finish their mission when the congenial problem revealed why he wanted to get home promptly.

More and more of our business executives are learning that they can get more out of their workers by inspiring their friendliness than by inserting fear. Human beings in all ranks and stations of life, it is being discovered, respond better to human treatment than to inhuman treatment. The lash is proving less effective than love. Harmony yields better dividends than hate.

• • •

General Motors, the most profitable of all modern industrial corporations, is presided over by A. P. Sloan, who declares that he never passes an order, but that every decision is reached after the fullest discussion with everyone interested and after everyone is convinced of the wisdom of the proposed action. In fact, General Motors is the most conspicuous example of democracy ever had of managerial democracy. There are, so to speak, a Cabinet, a Senate, a House of Representatives and innumerable committees. Everybody in authority is brought into the picture and encouraged to voice his views fearlessly.

The American Telephone and Telegraph Company, the largest employer in the world, and having more assets and more stockholders than any other enterprise here or elsewhere, was for long headed by a forceful driver, Theodore N. Vail, who, however, tried to blend a measure of democracy with his constitutional autocracy. The present head of the company is distinctly of the leader type. Walter S. Gifford is the very opposite of a rough-buckling, domineering, high handed order giver.

The United States Steel Corporation has had a similar experience. Judge Gary was indubitably an autocratic executive. Nobody ever dared to question the wisdom of any of his decisions. It should be added, however, that this came about partly because his associates almost always found, when they differed from him, that events proved his judgment to have been the sounder and more forward looking.

Daniel A. Farrell, his successor as chief executive is of a different type. This incident reveals Farrell's make-up. He arrived at a time one day and proceeded to the mouth of the shaft. He was stopped and told that rather dangerous conditions had developed and that he must not go down.

"Haven't you been working down there?" he asked, and told that, of course, there were, he immediately stepped into the cage, remarking, "If it is fit to have men down there, it's just as fit for me."

• • •

General Electric has become one of the world's very foremost industrial organizations. Its friend, Owen D. Young, early won fame, not as a ruthless driver, but as a conciliator of unexhaustible patience, of unique resourcefulness, of unquestionable fairness and of infinite good humor. He always seeks to lead rather than drive them. He attains his objective by the power of honest, persuasion, not by force. And, as in the case of General Motors, the financial results are entirely satisfactory to stockholders.

The new head of Westinghouse, Andrew W. Robertson, is essentially of the Owen Young type. Trained as a lawyer, like Young, he handled business cases so successfully, usually through settling them out of court, that he was made an executive of his corporation because of the high loyalty of his colleagues and of the workers, greatly improved the financial results, was made president—and now he has been chosen to direct the world's second largest electric manufacturing company.

And it is significant that it is men of this stamp who are being selected to head the country in these latter days for positions of tremendous importance.

"Our conference in Paris dragged along. About the first of June I realized that we might be spending many weeks there, and yet I did not wish to assume the arbitrary position of ordering up the George Washington for a wedding; nor did I wish to have it thought that I was going home on a given day. But I did say to them that on the 10th day of June, my son was to be married in Cleveland, O., and that on the 17th of June I expected to be home by a decree from Hamilton College. From that time on there was no need of my urging a settlement. When small differences of opinion came some one would say, 'We must get Mr. Young, home for his wedding; we must get him back to Hamilton College to get his degree'"

• • •

(Copyright 1929, by B. C. Forbes.)

Views of Wall Street

WHILE most of the unbiased observers are advising great caution with respect to the public utility issues, Columbia Gas appears to have won support of powerful banking interests who assert this stock has not been unduly exploited. A great backlog of strength is furnished Columbia by knowledge that United Corporation is anxious to secure a substantially larger investment in the company. From the standpoint of earnings, also, Columbia does not suffer in comparison with the other utility properties. Its price-to-profit ratio is relatively low.

American Bank Note this year may show better than $6 a share profit, according to estimates

WITH Baldwin supplying evidence that its sponsors are inclined to let its price slip occasionally, and with revival of report the company's recapitalization plan may be announced shortly, the railroad equipment shares are coming in for greater attention. The particular speculative favorite appears to be American Steel Foundries, in which an active group is operating. Besides its earnings, which for the first half year may cover the full year's $3 dividend, emphasis is again placed on merger possibilities.

• • •

In considering Spalding, due regard should be given to its position as a chain-store concern. It is argued by a house which points out that it is selling at a price-to- more favorable than other companies in the specialty chain store field. Net income of Spalding last year totaled $1,842,000 which was 7.4 per cent of gross sales of $26,000,000. The price upon the recovery was 24 per cent and in 1928 equaled 5.30 per cent.

PREVAILING report that Consolidated Gas will make an offer to acquire Brooklyn Union Gas has basis in the logic of such a deal, since it would give Consolidated the last important utility property in New York City not now in the Consolidated fold. The reported offer—of two shares Consolidated plus $30 a share cash for each share Brooklyn Union—seems far-fetched at present; the action of Brooklyn Union certainly indicates no such offer. However, the Brooklyn stockholders are in extremely favorable position to demand a fine price for their holdings.

• • •

• • •

RECOVERY in stock prices has been accompanied to an extent exceeding the fondest expectations of the majority and now it is becoming more evident that the market is headed for a rest period. With the hot weather season here, the best-informed are looking to an irregular market for at least weeks to come

CONSTRUCTION AWARDS SHOW BIG GAINS

Measured by value of contracts let, heavy construction operations, taking the country as a whole, continue well above last year. Awards announced in the past week were valued at $36,361,000, as against $77,064,000 in the preceding week, and $57,225,000 in the corresponding week last year, Engineering News-Record reports.

The sums involved in the week's operations, by classes, follow. Industrial buildings, $8,341,000; commercial, residential and educational buildings, $53,181,000; streets and roads, $15,133,000, and other engineering construction, $9,206,000

Awards on big jobs, all classes of construction operations, announced since the first of the year were valued at $2,178,130,000, which compares with $1,654,182,000 in the corresponding period last year.

Baldwin Splitup Is Seen as Possibility

Recapitalization of Baldwin Locomotive Works by splitting common shares four-for-one is a possibility of near future. It is understood Fisher interests have been giving consideration to stock splitup for some time although no action has yet been taken by board. It is not believed preferred stock would be called, however, as this would involve payment of premium of $5,000,000 on top of investment by Baldwin which is engaged in the new general steel castings.

Pullman Groomed

Chicago interests are grooming Pullman for a pool operation, based on expectation that the 42 per cent gain in net in the first quarter will be improved upon in the current three months.

This Day in Our History

ON June 22, 1807, a British ship, Leopard, captured an American frigate, Chesapeake, and forced it to submit to a search. This outrage caused thousands to call for war, but it was not declared until five years later. Then the young United States made a brilliant record for herself on the sea.

FOREST LOVE

by Hazel Livingston

Thrilling Serial of Love and the Gay Path

Before he had exhausted half of his arguments she escaped, pleading that she just couldn't keep him from work another minute, and he was left with the ruined experiment—some three weeks of patient work gone up in smoke—and a sneaking suspicion that he had been made a fool of.

"If that's the way she feels about it, ALL RIGHT!" He went back to work with a vengeance. But nothing progressed as it should, so he stopped and lit his pipe and sat there in the small, littered lab, trying to concentrate on the rows of figures on the yellow checked paper that represented so many hours of patient labor.

It wasn't easy to put Nancy out of mind, once you had seen her. She was too vital, too disturbingly alive. Even softly, fragrantly lovely. He kept remembering the absurd way her eyelashes curled back, the way her hair twined itself around your fingers when you touched it—soft, babyish ringlets. The eager, lilting way she laughed.

"I wish I'd never set eyes on her!" he groaned, staring at the closely pencilled yellow sheets, and seeing Nancy instead.

* * * * * * * *

"I never heard of anything so silly!" Louise Hollenbeck stormed in coming in just in time to see Nancy hang up the receiver, and burst into tears. "If you wanted to go why didn't you? Making up a great big lie, and then crying about it!"

"Mama," Nancy wailed. "Mama spoiled everything. I never want to see him again. Never."

"How could mama spoil it when she hasn't seen him? What do you mean?"

"I don't. But just the same, I don't want to go and . . . and . . . fall in love right now, when I'm just starting to have a little fun . . . if I were older, like you, Lou, I wouldn't mind . . . but when I'm starting out, and everything ahead."

Louise's hand clutched the chair. So . . . that was the reason! Even in dark, purplish knots. "How do you know there's anything ahead? Maybe you're twenty-four . . . oh, for Pete's sake, stop CRYING, will you? Such a fuss over a MAN!"

But Nancy wept on softly, and grumbling, Louise went and got the witch hazel and cotton for her eyes

Every year, ever since they could remember, the Hollenbeck girls had spent the summer with the Craigs.

"Of course, I want you, too, Kitty," Mrs. Craig, who had gone to Miss Small's Select Seminary for Young Ladies with Mrs. Hollenbeck, always said.

But that was just a polite gesture. Cora Craig and her little circle who had known Kitty Hollenbeck when she was Kitty Peebles, knew perfectly well that she never went anywhere any more. How could she on Peter Hollenbeck's miserable salary, and without even one servant in the house? It was the world's wonder that the girls managed to keep up appearances as well as they did.

For weeks they had been busy getting ready. At least Louise had and mama ineffectually followed her about the house, trailing bits of lace and chiffon, emerging, triumphant, from dark clothes with ancient hats and scuffed satin slippers. "Look Louise, if we have this blocked, and get some new ribbon, don't you think it would be sweet?" These shifts are practically always good as new. With the heels straightened, and half soles . . ."

It drove Louise nearly mad, especially with Nancy failing her the last minute, mooning in corners, and no help at all.

"Nancy, if you don't get in and help we won't be able to go!" she threatened for the last time, when Thursday was almost gone, and still a thousand things left to do.

"Don't nag—there's all kinds of time!" But after a moment she laid down her book and went into the kitchen where the ironing board was laid, and last year's resurrected summer dresses still faintly warm and damp from Lou's iron, hung dejectedly over chairs.

"For two pins I wouldn't go," she announced flatly, as Mrs. Hollenbeck later with old Rats Louise had refused to have anything to do with, passed on her way to the bathroom.

"It's that Mr. Tully—she's afraid of seeing him again!" Mama thought, clairvoyant for once. And aloud, "I thought you girls loved camp! The Craig's beautiful place!"

"That's just it," Nancy seized on the idea. "The Craig's beautiful place, and the same beautiful people every year. Same girls, same phant, from dark clothes with ancient hats and scuffed satin slippers. "Look Louise, if we have this blocked, and get some new ribbon, don't you think it would be sweet?" These shifts are practically always good as new. With the heels straightened, and half soles . . ."

Mat Tully is the only new one in three years, and we've already discovered him. When good does it do us, going there? A little fun, and then it's all over. With one decent trip we'd get more out of it than 40 years at the Craig's. Look at Alice Bulwinkle, with her money going, lifted bodily into position to her here? And she went to Honolulu, and they RAVED over her!"

Honolulu. In her mind's eye mama saw her girls, prettier than Alice Bulwinkle by far, taking Honolulu by storm, coming back with engagement rings. The Orient is so romantic, so full of eligible bachelors. . . .

"Maybe next year. Of course it is very expensive, with two young ladies. Still if papa . . . we'll see," she murmured, the tears for today's tragedy forgotten in the thrill of tomorrow's triumph.

"If only your Aunt Ellie would be a little more generous, she could do so much . . . still if papa's stock pays . . . it would be nice to sail on the Aloha, the captain was so polite when the Sommertons sailed last winter. . . ."

Mama was happy, day dreaming again. Mama who lived in her own make-believe world. Shutting her eyes to the hard, ugly truth that was always threatening her happiness. Ignoring bills, ignoring this new, rich society that wouldn't recognize her girls. Ignoring papa's increasing age and infirmities, the general shabbiness of the house. Pretending. Pretending she wasn't worrying. Worrying about everything. Everything but the right thing.

"Nancy, you aren't going to take your BEST kimono! To trail in the dust, indeed! . . . Mama came out of her day dream with a start, at sight of her hitherto indolent daughter energetically pressing the pleats of a pale coral chiffon.

And Nancy, who a minute ago had been going, lifted heavy eyes, alight with a curious Mona Lisa smile and said firmly, "I certainly am going to take it. And the satin mules, and the cream georgette nightie, too."

"But dear, you won't NEED them, and it's a duty. Surely you won't have any use for—"

While her mother had dreams of Honolulu, Nancy thought she had been on more practical things. Almost at the moment of renouncing the Craig's and their camp forever, she had thought of a reason—a very special reason for being there. A reason named Jim.

* * * * * * * *

In spite of Nancy's bad temper spurt, her frantic packing, they missed the morning train and didn't get off until afternoon. So there was no one to meet them as they got out in front of the big rambling house the Craigs had called "camp." Louise paid the ram-shackle taxi, and rang for Sam, the old Chinaman in charge in the bags. "Looks just the same," she sighed, and Nancy, flicking dust off her flannel skin pumps with pocket handkerchief, whispered, "Did you expect it to be different?"

The same girls. May Belle Craig, fresh and cool from a dip in the lake, appeared from one of the stairs when she heard their voices, her high heels clicking, pointed toes turned out into a wide, waddling gait.

"Lou and Nancy. We expected you hours ago, you villains. What a crime you had to come in alone. Oh, thought, of course, you'd be in some other train. The afternoon one is so hot. Mother, dear, here are the girls!"

Mrs. Craig, who looked very much as Mrs. Hollenbeck would have looked if she could have afforded a facial every week and henna packs for her hair, kissed them both perfunctorily and asked for their dear mother with a little puckering of the lips for Nancy who just a bit too affluent in her choice of companions, with a smart brown hat and mama's fox fur, only a little worn on the inside.

"Hello, Nan! Hello, Lou!" Vera Patton, the fat, good-natured daughter of Judge Peter Patton, and Helen Heffinger, another veteran "camper," followed Mrs. Craig, and right on their heels Cary Fleming and Gil Neal, and Neal's cousin, Frank Haworth.

"Go down yourself, will you, Gil? I was talking! Nan and I are going to try out the new canoe—"

Nancy, having scattered her court, burst into the room behind her and began feverishly to tongue her lips and powder her already shiny nose at the one small mirror.

"I almost got caught! I saw him coming and I couldn't get away from the idiots, and I knew just the way I looked, with my nose shining and covered with dust from head to foot—"

"I thought you were spured on Mat 'duty?' Louise said slowly.

"Nancy laid down the puff with great deliberation. "Mat 'duty?' who said anything about him? You've got him on the brain. Just because I liked him to start out at first, you keep HARPING on him. If you weren't a man-hater I'd think you liked him yourself."

"Don't be silly!" the older girl snapped, a shade too quickly, and then changed herself she added more naturally. "Besides, there isn't anyone else to impress, is there?"

"Of course. Didn't I tell you Jack Beamer is coming for a week?"

The CALL OF THE DESERT

by KATHARINE WOOLLEY

A SIX-DAY STORY

CHAPTER 5

WHEN Stanhope nodded in answer to Gillespie's request to leave the tent to see about the horses, his patience was almost at an end. Another ten minutes; then he'd have Sa'ad removed to Kelekiyah and search through the remaining tents.

"Hiest." . . . Sa'ad leapt up as if tried to get back to hear Deliya's message, for he knew it was his voice; but others heard it too, as he turned Nuri sprang forward with a roar.

"Stop! Son of a dog."

Sa'ad felt back a step, his arm flew to his breast, flashed out again, a sharp crack and a bullet whistled across the tent missing Nuri by an inch. The next instant Nuri fired back twice . . . and Sa'ad flung up his hands, turned round on his heels and fell to the ground.

It was over in a minute. Stanhope in a thundering voice forbade anyone to fire and ordered Sa'ad's men to put back their knives.

There was a sudden silence. Every Arab in the tent seemed to know that this was the decisive document. With the fatality of their race they all realized that the game was no longer in their hands. The struggle might rage in other parts of the country, but in this bit of the desert which was theirs it had already done its work.

Stanhope gave some quick orders to the police officer. Then he looked round for Gillespie.

"He is already mounted," said Nuri and solemnly gave the farewell greeting.

A policeman held Stanhope's horse and he swung himself into the saddle. Two of Nuri's men who knew every inch of the way were to act as guides on the forty mile ride to Yunus.

Fifth Ave Fashions New York

SMART CAPE FROCK

It is the smart Paris cape dress with fluttering handkerchief hem skirt that has met with such tremendous success at southern resorts this winter. The bodice has put tucks either side of centre front neck. The attached cape is cut so as to effect a yoke at front of bodice and fall over shoulders at back. The attached two-piece skirt is slim so as to keep the silhouette slender. A wide girdle hobbs in fulness through hips.

Style No. 8106 is interpreted in printed voile. It is designed in sizes 16, 18, 20 years, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust. In the medium size, 3¾ yards of 39-inch material with 5⅝ yards of binding makes this useful dress.

Shell pink washable silk crepe, silk green linen, printed linen, flowered chiffon, orchid silk crepe and yellow georgette crepe are ideal suggestions for summers, worn with sleeves omitted. Simple lined armholes for finish.

Pattern 8106 costs 15 cents in stamps or coin wrapped carefully. Enclose 15 cents additional, if you desire a copy of our latest book of Fifth Avenue Fashions. All our styles are created in Paris or New York. Every pattern contains full directions. No experience necessary. Very easy to use and guaranteed to fit perfectly.

Address all orders to Boston American Fashion Dept., 551 Fifth Ave., New York City.

THEATER TICKETS FOR CROSS-WORD WINNERS

Five pair of tickets daily to the Olympia Washington Street Theater go to the first five to solve the crossword puzzle in the American. Neatness of work will count, too. The tickets entitle holders to view "The Squall," at the Olympia Washington Street for the week beginning June 25.

"Are you ready, Gillespie? I can't see you."

Her mare slowed down to a walk because Stanhope had pulled in his. He was the cause of her unsteadiness.

She must steel herself till it all meant as little to her as it did to Stanhope. Surely that would drive the pain from her heart?

But she was wrong about Stanhope. He wished passionately that he could feel indifferent to his discovery of that morning.

At last the guides mulled a halt. It was less than two hours before dawn and they'd covered about thirty miles. They were entering a rather narrow-necked wadi. It would be best to have a short sleep in the open plain and ride on then at dawn when they could see where they were going, ride quickly through the wadi.

Colin was beginning to be very weary. The night was at its darkest as it is in the hour before dawn. She hoped she might fall asleep and forget her troubles, but she was overtired and sleep would not come.

"Yes, I am. It's hardly worth sleeping for so short a time," Colin's voice was reticent.

"I've something I want to say, Gillespie. I'd no business to speak of your affairs as I did this morning. It was quite inexcusable—I won't attempt any excuse. I've no right whatsoever to mention her name."

"Please don't think about it, sir." Her voice was muffled, for the apology had shaken the calm she had with difficulty assumed.

"There's something else I've got to say," went on Stanhope. Colin glanced up at him anxiously.

"It's Gillespie. You've got to tell me how you captured that paper I'm not going to ride into Yunus myself, but this may be the damned thing—and I your senior officer don't know how you found or what steps you took to capture it."

What should she do? Al-Asbir and Sa'ad would tell the truth, of course; what was there to hide any more? But she couldn't. It was all to have been so lovely, the unfolding of her story, a different setting, a very different Stanhope! She could tell it simply and she knew she'd tell it lamely to a Stanhope so openly impatient and cross? She was not being mulish—it was something in her, something essentially feminine, that shrunk back, withdrew into its shell, at his commanding tone.

"Hurry up, and please—the truth this time."

"I will tell you nothing willingly, but I will answer your questions."

"Well then, who did you take the paper from?"

"From Ibrahim."

"Did Ibrahim get away?"

"No, I left him with the police."

"But why and when did Ibrahim get the paper?"

"Sa'ad wanted to smuggle it away. Ibrahim took charge of it about two minutes before I got it from him."

"How did you know Ibrahim had the paper?"

"By whom?"

"By Deliya, Sa'ad's new wife."

"Where were you?"

"In the tent. In the women's quarters."

"You've not gone mad, have you, Gillespie? How long were you there?"

"About five hours."

"You were there about five hours? And at the same time you were riding with me in the desert? And sitting with me in Sa'ad's tent?" Stanhope's voice sounded dangerous. "Were you in two places at once?"

"It was Sandy."

"And who are you?" Stanhope's voice was frightening in its icy cold calm.

"I'm Colin."

"Colin who?"

"Colin Gillespie, of course."

"I believe you really have lost your senses! Do you mean you are sometimes yourself and sometimes your sister?"

"I'm always myself, though for some time I've had to pretend to be Sandy."

"How long have you been pretending?"

"Since I came to Kelekiyah."

"When did you come to Kelekiyah? Forgive me for asking."

"I came in February."

"And you've been with me ever since?"

"Yes, except this afternoon."

Stanhope made a gesture of despair. The guides had risen now and were tightening the girths of his and Gillespie's horses. A strange unearthly light was spreading and made Gillespie's face look white.

"Never mind, Gillespie. You've got a bit muddled. Alasdair will tell you when you really are. Let's get on now."

"You will not believe me now you would not believe me yesterday. I am Colin Gillespie, and I hope I may never see you or speak to you again."

She was in the saddle and away after the guides, a will o' the wisp fleeing through the misty air, and Stanhope had all he could do to mount his horse and ride after her.

The guides looked round to make sure that he had caught them up and then set off at a fast canter, they entered the neck of the wadi, a narrow passage with abruptly rising sides.

Stanhope's thoughts as he followed the trail of dust thrown up by the flying hoofs of Colin's mare were inexplicable even to Stanhope, who was mad, and not Gillespie? Gillespie was moving in front of him, and two of the guides he must push on faster.

He saw the first guide duck his head. Puff . . . puff . . . Three shots were ambushed! In the narrow-est stretch of the wadi!

One of the guides swayed in his saddle, and then hung over on one side. In an instant the second had pushed on his own horse, and the comrade's, riding neck to neck, the wounded man lying partly on his companion's horse, his legs still astride his own.

Phut . . . phut . . . phut . . . a hail of bullets, the marauders were now firing into their midst. Ah! Stanhope's horse was hit full in the stomach and pitched forward on to its head. Stanhope fell clear and unstunned. He was on his feet firing at a fluttering bit of sha he could see coming from behind a flattened hummock. But they'd got him, it was only a matter of seconds . . . another bullet had struck the noise, whizzed through his helmet, a third grazed his cheek . . . A thunder of hoofs . . . "Jump up," yelled Colin, "while I turn round. Get your foot into the stirrup."

She bore down on him, her head pressed against the mare's neck, her hand flying behind her as she wheeled round Stanhope and the dead horse.

He caught hold of the saddle with the hand which held the revolver and the stirrup with the other . . . got his toe into it and was on the mare's back, bending over and covering Colin with his own body. The mare leapt forward the moment she felt his weight and flew like the wind.

The guide was carrying them splendidly—now they were through the wadi and out into the great open plain flooded with the hazy and amber light of the rising sun.

A feeling of exultation filled Stanhope. "I've got through! The boy had behaved like a brick! He was leaning back rather heavily on his shoulder, though he must have had he reen hit? Stanhope tightened his arm round the swaying body and the slender waist. She looked down into the pale face of a fainting girl!

His amazement and incredulity were swept away by a flood of happiness . . . followed by a terror that she might be dead, for her eyelashes rested without movement on her white cheeks. He bent his head lower and saw her eyelids flutter and then he still again. Thank God she was alive!

His right hand was still gripping his revolver. There was no further danger. They'd beaten the ambush in the wadi; he shipped it into his tunic pocket and with two arms tried to hold her more comfortably. Then he noticed the blood running down her bare leg from the bullet wound she had got after she'd picked him up.

He looked round in despair . . . About a mile away he saw what might be a deserted and half-ruined tomb of some holy man. The unwounded guide, still supporting his companion, was making in its direction. Stanhope raged on the guide. The guide had lowered the wounded man to the ground, propping him up within the protection of the wall, and now looked anxiously from Colin to Stanhope.

"Help me get him down—No, don't touch him." Stanhope's voice rang sharp. "Lead the mare in that bit of broken wall, then I can lift him down quite easily. Steady now . . ."

Slowly he laid her on the sha with her head resting on the saddle-bags, and, kneeling beside her, put his hand on her heart, gently smoothing back her tumbled hair from her brow with his other hand. Then he pulled out his brandy flask and poured a little between her lips. Her eyelids opened for a moment and closed over her eyes again. He raised her head and gave her some more brandy. This time she tried to swallow it and a faint tinge of pink appeared on her white face. He felt her hands—they were cold; he rubbed them in his own, forcing back her circulation, and then gave her some more brandy. That brought her to full consciousness.

"Oh . . . don't say I've fainted! The paper, is that safe—in my pocket?"

"I don't care a—anything for the beastly paper if only you are better."

Stanhope slipped his arm behind her shoulders and raised her, and at the touch of her, now that she had recovered consciousness, he trembled.

"You're certainly not going to ride in to Yunus. I'll send a note to Gillespie to bring out a car. He has a leaf out of his notebook and scribbled a few lines, then cut up from his knees and climbed over the low wall. Somehow he felt he could hear him talking to the first guide, who a moment later rode off at a gallop.

Stanhope broke off a piece of chocolate and passed it to her. "Are you sure your head is comfortable like that? Is there nothing I can do? I believe your head is throbbing badly."

"Just a bit . . . Would you like to brush my hair for me? It's rather soothing if it's done back from the temples." She lifted an arm to show him how, and her sleeve fell back exposing a nasty little wound.

"Your arm! When did you get that? Not just now?"

"That was Ibrahim's bad shot. It will soon go when I get it properly cleaned and tied up."

Stanhope's left hand closed quietly over hers, he held his head, looking earnestly into her eyes.

"I believe you've done wonderful things. I can guess . . . I've yet to hear. You've just now saved my life and I've not yet even thanked you."

"You're the most wonderful girl and the sweetest and loveliest," he broke in when she had finished. "Have you been with me all the time and I never guessed? Have you really only been Sandy once—those few hours yesterday?"

"That's all; that's all I've seen you except the night he and I kept popping in and out of each other's clothes."

Colin felt the hand holding hers so gently and firmly quiver with some strong emotion which seemed to shake the whole man.

"Then my letter—all the terrible things I said about you—you had never shown to anyone . . . Oh, my dear, can you ever forgive me?"

Colin turned away her head to hide the tears which would come when she remembered his bitter words—she could not yet forget them.

Stanhope bent down and kissed her hand as it lay resting back her to do that. I don't see how you can ever forgive me."

"Please don't cry." He could not tell her how much he loved her. She must be free and then—perhaps . . .

"Look at me, Colin dearest. You are the most truthful woman in the world—tell me if there's any chance for me." I'll always love you, whatever your answer, but I must know if there's a glimmer of hope for me."

A glimmer of hope! Oh, Stanhope—there was all the stars in their courses shining down on you as on our last ride," and her eyes were like stars as they filled with happy tears.

Hidden Fires -:- By Aileen de Vilbiss

CHAPTER 34

AS the echoes of the shots died away, sanity broke through Jimmy's drink-crazed brain.

"Ruth! Ruth!" he called. "What have I done?"

He never knew anything of that lonely ride back to the cabins with the unconscious body of that wounded girl beside him. Don Carlos was the first person he met.

Seeing Jimmy was standing before him, with the quiet body of Ruth in his arms, and Jimmy's lifeless voice asking:

"I have shot the only human being I have ever loved. I think I have killed her."

But the silence was no deeper than the silence into which Ruth seemed to have gone . . . Broken only by the dry sobs which shook the body of Al Harding. But from Jimmy, sitting huddled on the ground outside, came never a sound.

It was Eugenie's clear thinking mind which finally got the little group organized. Everyone else seemed to be running madly about —lost motion everywhere. She awakened Colonel Drinkwater and told him whether any of his fellow officers knew anything about wounds.

"Yes, sir! This is awful: terrible! That poor girl." He bent over Ruth

"Don't stand there, Colonel. If any of those officers is on the first thing about surgery, awaken him and bring him over here immediately.

He found the frightened group standing about the unconscious girl, the form, lying so quietly on the rough cabin bed. He ordered them to take Jimmy away. Eugenie, who was washing away the red stream of Ruth's blood.

Afterwards, when he had made his examination he shook his head sadly.

"This is serious, Mrs. Nahuli," he reported. "I doubt she can stand the long ride back. But we must take the chance. An operation may save her life. The bullet is imbedded just below the heart."

"She has a chance?" Eugenie asked.

"A fighting one. But order the trip back to Wailuku at once. Phone ahead for preparations for an emergency operation."

It was a nightmare—that trip back to town. Ruth looked so still and white, her dark hair outlining the frail little face lying against the pillow. Eugenie, Al, sitting beside her, where they had improvised a bed for her, holding one of the small hands in his own bronzed one, whispering softly to ears that might never again hear his endearments.

"Sweetheart! Little sweetheart! Don't leave me, my own! You're my whole existence!"

DESERT MADE TO BLOOM

This bed of beautiful tulips occupies a spot which a few months ago was barren and desolate. Passersby whether they belong to the church or not are given a bit of cheer and inspiration which comes when a human being faces the beautiful.

THE REV. FRANCIS MARION JONES, M. A.

The latest church activity is landscape gardening and has been demonstrated in Hyde Park by the Clarendon Congregational Church.

Interest became so keen in plans suggested for beautifying the church yard that not only parishioners, but non-church members and even a Catholic neighbor turned to and gave the minister, the Rev. Francis Marion Jones, M. A., a helping hand. A barren, desert-like corner in Hyde Park has now become a blooming rock garden, and some uninteresting church steps equipped with small evergreens and decorative earthern pots for plants.

The Rev. Mr. Jones thought that religion should cultivate the aesthetic and beautiful. He had been despondent over the appearance of the church property, but like so many clergymen of small churches, he saw no funds available for such decoration. His desire finally took the form of a co-operative effort and for three months or more evenings and holidays volunteers worked on the project. From 20 to 25 men were numbered among the helpers, and a group of women got together to furnish refreshments when the male contingent began to show signs of weariness and hunger.

A beautiful tulip bed, that gives to a humble corner the appearance of a country estate, has been voted by the town as well as by the congregation, a really religious piece of work.

PROGRAMS FOR SUMMER NOW COMPLETE

The Mission School Alumni Association will hold its 33d annual reunion next Thursday evening in St. Alphonsus and in the Mission Church school halls at 7:30.

The school was built in 1890 and the first graduation was held in 1891.

Four Dorchester churches to unite during the vacation period are the Baker Memorial Church, the First Parish Church, Unitarian; Stoughton St. Baptist Church; Pilgrim Congregational Church. The first of these union meetings will be held in the Baker Memorial Church on Columbia rd., beginning next Thursday evening 7:30. Services will also be in this church Sunday, June 30. The next meetings, August 4, 11 and 18 will be in the Unitarian Meetinghouse Hill Church. The next at the Baptist Church, and the next at the Pilgrim Congregational.

The Rev. Clarence Dunham, of Pilgrim Church, Upharas Corner, will preach tomorrow morning on "A Unique Christ," and in the evening on "Four Great Maxims." This will be the last service in this church until August 22.

St. Michael Court No. 70 of South Boston will meet in G. A. R. Hall, South Boston, next Monday evening. The outing committee appointed by Chief Ranger Milan will report and suggestions regarding an outing will be discussed.

The Rev. G. E. Huntley, D. D., president of the Universalist S. S. Association, will preach at the Arlington Street tomorrow morning in the second of a series of union meetings to continue until September 22.

The Thursday novena at St. Stephen's—the shrine of the "Little Flower" in Boston—will have the Rev. Maurice O'Brien of St. Joseph's Church, West End, as the preacher on Thursday, June 27. The hours of the services are 12:20 noon, 3:30, 5:20 and 7:45 p. m. Father O'Brien will preach at the 5:20 and 7:45 p. m. devotions.

National director of the Catholic Daughters of America, Mrs. Catherine Salmon of Cambridge will leave soon for New Orleans where the 1929 convention is to be held July 1. The semi-annual meeting of the board of officers will be held in Galveston June 29-30.

The Rev. Henry Sloan Coffin will preach tomorrow morning at Trinity Church, Copley sq. In the evening the pulpit will be occupied by Bishop Slattery. The following Sunday the Rev. Gardiner Day will preach at both services.

The North Quincy Knights of Columbus baseball team has an unusual record of wins this season. This council gave a successful entertainment last Tuesday.

First Church, Congregational: Epworth League, Methodist: Old Colony, Baptist, all of Cambridge, will unite for summer services for ten Sundays beginning the first Sunday in July.

Representatives of five different denominations will be heard tomorrow on Boston Common, speaking under the auspices of the Greater Boston Federation of Churches, 2:30 p. m.

The Rev. William L. Stidger of the Copley Methodist Church will preach tomorrow morning on "They That Watch for the Morning." On June 30 he will take for his subject: "Long Sunny Tail Cliff" and Sunday, July 6, "The Great Divide." After that Dr. Stidger will be on the circuit of Chautauqua engagements through Pennsylvania and Virginia, in August he goes to Germany to address the international advertising clubs.

Four young men of the Mission Church parish were ordained to the priesthood last Sunday at St. Alphonsus, Eleogan, N. Y. They are Rev. Thomas Fallon, Rev. Arthur Finan, Rev. Thomas McManus and Rev. Edward O'Dowd, all of the Parker Hill section of Roxbury. The Rev. Fr. Fallon will celebrate his first solemn mass tomorrow in the Mission Church.

The Wellington Methodist Church Men's Club of Medford will conduct a lawn party on the church grounds this afternoon and evening. Among the attractions "Lilith the Gypsie Queen, Hank and Jerusey Dewbury of Calamity Corners, and a "delicious supper."

The Rev. William D. Goble, of the Central Square Baptist Church, Cambridge, will preach tomorrow morning on "Nothing is Really Lost," and in the evening on "The Art of Being Prepared." Dr. Goble has just returned from a short honeymoon trip in the south.

The Rev. Edward C. Camp of the Watertown Congregational Church will preach tomorrow morning on "Looking Out for Number One." Following tomorrow there will be union meetings in Watertown.

"Is the Universe, Including Man, Evolved by Atomic Force?" will be the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, June 23, 1929.

The Golden Text is: "Behold, God exalteth by his power; who teacheth like him? Remember that thou magnify his work, which men behold" (Job 36:22,24).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "The true theory of the universe, including man, is not in material history but in spiritual development. . . . Man is, and forever has been, God's reflection. God is infinite, therefore ever present, and there is no other power nor presence. Hence the spirituality of the universe is the only fact of creation" (pp. 547, 471).

The Cathedral of St. Paul announces that its farm at Hubbardston has opened its season, and is ready to receive applications from people wishing to spend several weeks in the real country. There are still places available for those who wish to go there over the Fourth of July.

The Federal Council of Churches, through its committee on International Good Will is preparing to send to Philippine children through the co-operation of the children of the United States "treasure boxes." These, made of attractive material, will contain many things the youngsters of the far away islands will enjoy and treasure.

Guild Head

MRS. MARTHA MOORE AVERY

Of Medford, president of the Catholic Truth Guild, organized for the purpose of informing the public on the principles, history and practices of the Catholic church. The 13th season of open-air meetings on Boston Common will begin tomorrow afternoon, 4 o'clock.

AN INCREASE OF GOOD WILL COMING

The Calvert Round Table of Boston, made up of prominent Catholics, Protestants and Jews and organized to inculcate good will between these three great faiths has chosen an advisory board to map out a program for next fall and winter.

The board is made up of Mr. Bernard J. Rothwell, chairman; and Messrs. Jeremiah Burke, George W. Coleman, Joseph Lee, Judge Frank Leveroni, Daniel Sargent, W. J. Cooney, Frank Adams Cram, L. C. Kirstein.

Mr. P. A. O'Connell is president of this new organization which when completed will number about 100 prominent men. Those who have the choosing of the various members are determined to keep a high standard of citizenship in mind, and therefore the full quota is only four-fifths complete, about 80 having been already selected. .

GOLDSTEIN TO COME AGAIN TO COMMON

Interested citizens who are anxious to know more about Catholic religious customs, principles and history will have an opportunity to listen to Mr. David Goldstein, and others who will appear on Boston Common mall every Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock, beginning tomorrow for the 13th season. Mr. Goldstein will be assisted by Mr. John A. Breen, William J. Kerrish and others. Mrs. Martha Moore Avery of Medford is the active president of the Catholic Truth Guild and announces not only meetings on Boston Common Sunday afternoons through July, August and September, but also on Wednesday evenings at the boat landing at City Point, and also in Columbus sq., Columbus ave., near Newton st.

Speakers will address street crowds from the papal-colored van owned by the Guild and now familiar to the people of Boston with its sentiments of religion and patriotism, and bearing a picture of the cross.

A unique feature of Sunday talks is the forum half-hour to follow Mr. Goldstein, when he will answer questions and explain puzzling points in Catholic doctrine.

Mrs. F. E. Slattery to Be Guest of Honor

The annual outing of the Joyce Kilmer Literary Circle will be held Thursday, June 27, at the Hotel Preston, Beach Bluff, Swampscott, where dinner will be served at one o'clock.

The program for the afternoon will consist of bathing and bathing and bridge on the verandas.

Mrs. Francis E. Slattery, president of the League of Catholic Women, will be the guest of honor.

Married by Father After A. M. Service

Miss Marie Summerbell, daughter of the Rev. Carlyle Summerbell of the Unitarian Church, Roslindale, will be married by her father following the morning service tomorrow to Mr. Kent Pellett, a newspaper man on the staff of the Nebraska Democrat. He is a graduate of the Iowa Agricultural College and has written much for the American Bee Journal. Miss Summerbell has taught school for the last two years. The couple will make their home in Wayne, Neb.

Hearst Prize Goes to Catholic Boy

Robert L. Sullivan, a pupil of Cathedral Catholic high school, Syracuse, N. Y., won the championship in the boys' division of the first annual nation-wide flag contest of the United States Flag Association, sponsored by the Hearst newspapers, in the final competition held on the east steps of the United States Capitol.

NO PLACE FOR A SNOB

(Rights reserved.)

But rarely a place for the grouch;
There's ever a place for the man who is neat,
But rarely a place for the slouch;
There's a place for the man who is ever polite,
But not for the man who is rude;
There's a place for the man who is friendly in ways,
But not for the snob and the prude.

But not for the man that's untrue;
A place for the man who does more than his share,
Not for one who wants more than his due;
There's a place for the man who holds to the good,
Not for one who near devilry lurks;
There's a place for the man who toils with a will,
But there's not for the man who shirks.

The Most Popular Woman in the World

The Rev. Herbert Johnson will preach at the Dudley St. Baptist Church tomorrow evening and will take as his subject "Christian Tall Cliff" and Sunday, July 6, "The Great Divide." After that Dr. Stidger will be on the circuit of Chautauqua engagements through Pennsylvania and Virginia, in August he goes to Germany to address the international advertising clubs.

Quebec Ceremony to Bless Automobiles

More than a thousand owners of automobiles recently drove their cars to the sanctuary of St. Christopher at St. Louis de Courville near Quebec to have them blessed. The same day a similar ceremony occurred at St. Marie de Bauce.

Church Head

NEWS-VIEWS OF MODERN HOMES

FINE POINTS of MODERN HOMES

By BETTY BONNELL

TODAY I am going to tell you some interesting things about foundations and cellars, but before I get into that subject, I want to tell you how glad I am that my series of articles are meeting with such popular favor.

Betty Bonnell

I have received any number of requests for literature about the various products that go into the modern home and in order to be of service to you, I have gathered many interesting booklets about the products listed at the bottom of my article. If you would like any of this literature, just write to me and I will be glad to send it to you.

Let us now look into that practical "masculine" problem of providing a proper foundation on which to build a home. There are two "foundations," of course, one an understanding of the financial side of home ownership, which still is the job of "the man of the house," and the other, the business of practical, substantial—and economical—construction.

Concrete, reinforced with steel, of course, produces the most substantial foundation. But is not always necessary, or advisable, economically—to build the cellar walls of poured concrete. The building of frame and the mixing and pouring of mortar in mass comprise an expensive undertaking.

Down through the years from Colonial days rough stone made up the bulk of foundations in this country. Gradually, as the production of brick advanced, the smaller "cast stones" made from clay, began to take precedence.

Then came the development of the concrete block, that substance most generally in use in the East in the building of foundations of moderate-priced homes.

Concrete blocks should be made of American manufactured Portland cement mixed with a proper proportion of sand, gravel, crushed stone, cinders or other suitable material making a very durable building block.

LITERATURE on Standard Materials and Products used in the construction of the Modern Home will be sent to you if you will check the subjects that interest you and mail to the National Modern Homes Bureau, Inc., Real Estate Dept., Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston.

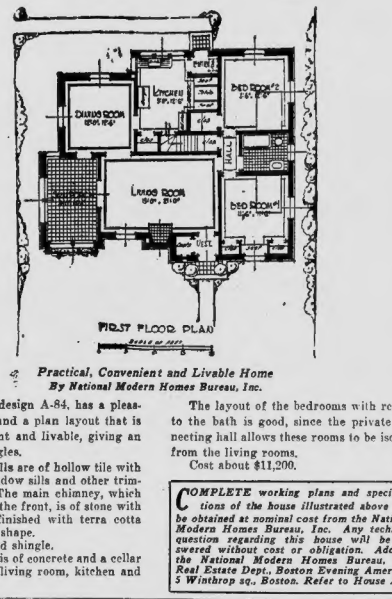
Bungalow, Costing About $11,200

R. Chawner & Bro. Architects
NATIONAL MODERN HOMES BUREAU



Practical, Convenient and Livable Home
By National Modern Homes Bureau, Inc.

THIS bungalow, design A-84, has a pleasing exterior and a plan layout that is practical, convenient and livable, giving an appeal from all angles.

The exterior walls are of hollow tile with stucco finish. Window sills and other trimmings are birch. The main chimney, which forms a feature of the front, is of stone with a brick cap and finished with terra cotta pots of interesting shape.

The layout of the bedrooms with respect to the bath is good, since the private connecting hall allows these rooms to be isolated from the living rooms.

COMPLETE working plans and specifications of the house illustrated above may be obtained at nominal cost from the National Modern Homes Bureau, Inc. Any technical question regarding this house will be answered without cost or obligation. Address the National Modern Homes Bureau, Inc., Real Estate Dept., Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston. Refer to House A-84.

CITY PLANNING MEN TO MEET

The general topic to be discussed at the conference, at which W. W. Butts, St. Louis, will preside, is "What Are the Functions of the National Association of Real Estate Boards in the Field of City Planning?"

The conference will open with a symposium on this subject in which the following speakers will take part: John Nolen, Cambridge, Howard K. Menhinick, assistant editor of "City Planning," Cambridge; Edward J. O'Brien, Minneapolis, Minn., and W. L. Pollard, Los Angeles, Cal.

The activities of a State planning department will be discussed by Edward T. Hartman, executive of the planning boards of the State of Massachusetts. Flavel Shurtleff, executive secretary of the National City Planning Conference, will outline for the realtors the plans now under way for an international housing and town planning congress to be held in Italy this coming fall.

The city planning conference will be open to all realtors interested in the subject.

A car needs a home. Have you a garage for rent? Tell about it and give location in the Want Real Ads. That's the way to fill it.

TO BAN UGLY ROAD 'ADS'

A special conference on the problem presented by certain types of outdoor advertising will be held as a part of the convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, Boston, June 25 to 28.

Ward C. Gifford, Kansas City, Mo., who will preside at the conference, states that the purpose of calling such a meeting is not to promote any particular plan for controlling outdoor advertising but to pool information on the situation, with a view to eliminating eventually the objectionable type of outdoor advertising which detracts from the sightliness of residential areas and mars rural scenic beauty. The discussions are to be informal and realtors interested in the subject are invited to attend the meeting.

Organizations sending representatives to the conference include: the American Nature Association, the General Federation of Women's Clubs, the Maine Committee for Restriction of Outdoor Advertising, the American Civic Association and the Bureau of Public Roads, of the United States Department of Agriculture.

$166,000 Property in Brookline Sale

Henderson & Ross report the sale of the apartment house property at 315-327 St. Paul st., Brookline. The transfer involves six three-story brick buildings and approximately 33,079 sq. ft. of land.

The property extends from Thatcher st. to Egmont st., and has a total tax valuation of $166,000. Title was conveyed by Ralph E. Wedgeworth to John North, who bought for investment. Final papers have gone to record.

Stores Leased by Grocery Concern

The Economy Grocery Stores, Inc., has leased the store and basement at 1536 Tremont st. from Margaret Seymour. The same firm also has leased the store and basement at 51 Calumet st., Roxbury, from Harris Cotto.

Store No. 1 in the Parkway Stores Block at Falmouth has been leased by the Falmouth Trust, Inc., to Emma Louise Rose.
